

ElizabethanDrama.org

presents

the Annotated Popular Edition of

GEORGE-A-GREENE,
THE PINNER OF WAKEFIELD

ANONYMOUS

Earliest Extant Edition: 1599

Featuring complete and easy-to-read annotations.

Annotations and notes © Copyright Peter Lukacs and ElizabethanDrama.org, 2021.
This annotated play may be freely copied and distributed.

GEORGE-A-GREENE, THE PINNER OF WAKEFIELD

Anonymous.

Earliest Extant Edition: 1599

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ:

Edward, King of England.

James, King of Scotland.

The English Rebels:

Earl of Kendal.

Lord Bonfield.

Sir Gilbert Armstrong.

Sir Nicholas Mannerling.

Other English Characters:

Earl of Warwick.

George-a-Greene.

Jenkin, George-a-Greene's man.

Wily, George-a-Greene's boy.

William Musgrove.

Cuddy, son to Musgrove.

Grime.

Bettris, daughter to Grime.

Jane-a-Barley.

Ned-a-Barley, son to Jane.

Justice.

Other Scottish Characters:

Lord Humes.

John Taylor, messenger to King James.

Robin Hood's Gang:

Robin Hood.

Much, the Miller's Son.

Scarlet.

Maid Marian.

Townsmen, Shoemakers, Soldiers, Messengers, etc.

INTRODUCTION to the PLAY

Very little is known about the provenance of George-a-Greene, the Pinner of Wakefield, other than it was performed in 1593. Historically attributed, although with reservations, to Robert Greene, the play is now generally filed under the category of Anonymous.

George-a-Greene himself was a legendary figure of English folklore, a hero of low rank who single-handedly snuffed a rebellion which supposedly took place in the time of Richard I. The play dramatizes these events (which were recorded in an early history), before appending a further story of George-a-Greene's dealings with that more well-known legend, Robin Hood.

OUR PLAY'S SOURCE

The text of this play was originally adapted from the 1876 edition of Greene's plays edited by Alexander Dyce, and was then carefully compared to the original 1599 quarto. Consequently, much of the original wording and spelling from this earliest printing of the play has been reinstated.

NOTES ON THE ANNOTATIONS

Mention in the annotations of various editors refers to the notes supplied by these scholars for their editions of this play. Their works are cited fully below.

The most commonly cited sources are listed in the footnotes immediately below. The complete list of footnotes appears at the end of this play.

Footnotes in the text correspond as follows:

1. Oxford English Dictionary (OED) online.
2. Crystal, David and Ben. Shakespeare's Words. London; New York: Penguin, 2002.
3. Collins, J. Churton. The Plays and Poems of Robert Greene. Oxford: The Clarendon Press, 1905.
4. Dyce, Rev. Alexander. The Dramatic and Poetical Works of Robert Greene and George Peele. London: George Routledge and Sons, 1876.
15. Dickinson, Thomas H., ed. Robert Greene. London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1909?

NOTES.

A. Who is George-a-Greene, and What is a Pinner?

George-a-Greene is a legendary figure of English history, whose various exploits might have once been as well-known as those of Robin Hood; in fact, the two characters were contemporaries, both living in the north of England in the time of Richard I. The legends of George and Robin Hood in fact cross paths, as stories and poems recount their meeting on at least one occasion.

While Robin Hood was a noble who had been dispossessed of his title and belongings by Prince John (who ruled England while his brother Richard I was on Crusade in the Holy Land), George-a-Greene was of more prosaic origin: His father was a yeoman farmer, and George naturally was of the same class. The stories told of George take place while he served as Pinner, or Pinder, of the town of Wakefield, which meant that he was responsible for capturing and impounding the town's stray animals.

B. A History and a Ballad.

Our play, the anonymously authored George-a-Greene, the Pinner of Wakefield, was known to have been performed in 1593, even though the earliest extant printing of the play is from 1599. Attempting to determine its date of composition would be an act of absolute conjecture.

Other issues of chronology are just as frustrating to work out: the play is clearly a dramatization of The History of George-a-Greene, a work which recounts a number of legends told about the famous Wakefield pinner; our play follows the events of the History quite closely, but the earliest known edition of the History dates from 1632.

The play also incorporates some language and ideas from a brief ballad describing the first meeting between George-a-Greene and Robin Hood, but nothing more can be said with regards to the date of the ballad's origins, other than that it must have existed prior to the composition of the play.

One benefit of having the History to refer to is that it clarifies the meaning of some of the mysterious lines and stage directions of the play.

C. Our Author Mildly Modifies the Events of the History.

As noted above, our unknown dramatist, in translating the events of the History to the stage, stuck quite closely to the story as recounted in the prose work.

But the author did make two major changes which are worth noting: firstly, the King in the play is identified as "Edward", rather than Richard I; which Edward is supposed to be represented is unclear, and frankly unimportant. Furthermore, whereas in the prose telling the king is away on Crusade (England famously was ruled by Richard's greedy and malicious brother Prince John in his absence), in the play, Edward has never left England. This makes for a bit of awkwardness in the plot, as we are left to wonder why Edward takes so long to respond to the rebellion brewing up north.

A second variation is that in the play, the rebellious English nobles are joined in their mischief-making by the generically named "James", the King of Scotland. James invades England at the same time the insurrection is to break out, as a way to support the discomfiting of the English monarch. The details about James in the play are thus of the author's own invention.

D. So Who Wrote George-a-Greene, the Play?

A brief handwritten note appended to one of the original editions of the play suggests rather vaguely that Robert Greene was the play's author. This piece of very weak evidence may be supported by the fact that the play includes quite a large number of words, expressions and ideas that appear in the other plays known definitively to have been written by Robert Greene.

Based on this slight evidence, early literary editors such as Alexander Dyce and Churton Collins included George-a-Greene in their collections of plays written by Robert Greene, albeit with some admitted hesitation. However, the modern line of thought leans strongly against identifying Robert Greene with the play, and so our author's name will likely remain obscure forever.

E. Not So Iambic, Not So Much Pentameter.

The text of George-a-Greene, as it has come down to us, does have some pretensions to following iambic pentameter, but does not do so with any consistency. Early editors, Dyce in particular, have tried to force the lines into a regime of traditional Elizabethan regularity, but the exercise is ultimately fruitless. Our recommendation? Do not overly-concern yourself with the rhythm of the lines of this play!

F. Scene Breaks, Settings, and Stage Directions.

George-a-Greene, the Pinner of Wakefield was originally published in a 1599 quarto. As usual, we lean towards adhering to the wording of this earliest volume as much as possible.

Words or syllables which have been added to the original text to clarify the sense or repair the meter are surrounded by hard brackets [ ]; these additions are often adopted from the suggestions of later editors. A director who wishes to remain truer to the original text may of course choose to omit any of the supplementary wording.

The 1599 quarto does not divide George-a-Greene into Acts and Scenes, or provide settings or asides. Act and scene breaks and settings have been adopted from Dickinson, and asides from Dyce.

Finally, as is our normal practice, a good number of the quarto's stage directions have been modified, and others added, usually without comment, to give clarity to the action. Most of these changes are adopted from Dyce.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

At Bradford.

Enter the Earl of Kendal; with him Lord Bonfield, Sir Gilbert Armstrong, Sir Nicholas Mannering, and John.

1 Kendal. Welcome to Bradford, martial gentlemen,
2 Lord Bonfield, and Sir Gilbert Armstrong both;
And all my troops, even to my basest groom,

4 Courage and welcome! for the day is ours.
Our cause is good, it is for the land's avail:
6 Then let us fight, and die for England's good.

8 All. We will, my lord.

10 Kendal. As I am Henry Momford, Kendal's earl,
You honour me with this assent of yours;
12 And here upon my sword I make protest
For to relieve the poor or die myself.

14 And know, my lords, that James, the King of Scots,
Wars hard upon the borders of this land:

16 Here is his post. –
Say, John Taylor, what news with King James?

Setting: Bradford is a historic city in the county of West Yorkshire, located about 300 miles north of London.

Entering Characters: the first characters we meet are a group of nobles and knights who are fomenting a rebellion against the English King Edward. The Earl of Kendal is the leader of the enterprise.

John is a messenger of the Scottish King James, who is in league with the English rebels.

Our play is a dramatization of a prose collection of several of the legends extolling the exploits of George-a-Greene. The earliest extant version of the work (published in the early 17th century) was known as The History of George-a-Greene: we shall refer to it simply as the History.

In the History, the leaders of the rebellion are Kendal, Bonfield and Armstrong, while Mannering is identified simply as "a servant of the earl's". Our dramatist bestows knighthood on Mannering.

= warlike, brave.<sup>1</sup>

3: Kendal extends his welcome to every last man who has appeared to support him, down to the lowest servant (basest groom).

all = ie. "to all".

even = typically, as here, a monosyllable: e'en. Modern two-syllable words with a medial v are normally pronounced in a single syllable, with the v elided.

= ie. "victory is ours"; a common expression.
= benefit.

= ie. the Earl of Kendal.

12-13: Kendal takes an oath upon his sword; such a vow was viewed seriously because the sword's hilt, or handle, formed the shape of a cross with the blade.

make protest = promise, swear.

Line 13: Kendal reveals the ostensible reason the nobles are attempting to overthrow their king.

For to = ie. to.

14-15: the Scottish King James is working in cooperation with Kendal and the rebels, timing an invasion of England with the eruption of the insurrection.

Line 15: in fact, James has already taken his army into England, causing havoc in the English counties south of the two nations' border.

= messenger.

18	John. War, my lord, [I] tell, and good news, I trow ;	= believe.
20	for King Jamy vows to meet you the twenty-sixth of	= commonly used familiar name for King James; as we will see, even James himself is not above referring to himself this way.
	this month, God willing; marry , doth he, sir.	= common oath derived from the name of the Virgin Mary.
22	Kendal. My friends, you see what we have to win. –	= ie. what assistance or advantages.
24	Well, John, commend me to King James, and tell him,	= basically, "give my regards".
26	I will meet him the twenty-sixth of this month,
	And all the rest; and so, farewell.
28	[Exit John.]
30	Bonfield, why stand'st thou as a man in dumps ?	= ie. "do you appear so downcast?"
	Courage! for, if I win, I'll make thee duke:
32	I Henry Momford will be king myself;
	And I will make thee Duke of Lancaster,
34	And Gilbert Armstrong Lord of Doncaster.
36	Bonf. Nothing, my lord, makes me amazed at all,	= dismayed. <sup>1,2</sup>
	But that our soldiers find our victuals scant.	37: provisions, especially food, are low in the rebel army.
38	We must make havoc of those country-swains ;	38-40: the rebels have no choice but to take what they need by force: Bonfield recommends they threaten violence against the local peasants ( those country-swains ) if they do not turn over the requested supplies; such a show of force will induce other towns to donate provisions more willingly!
40	For so will the rest tremble and be afraid,
	And humbly send provision to your camp.
42	Armstr. My Lord Bonfield gives good advice:	43: the local population treat the rebels with contempt, and remain loyal to their king.
	They make a scorn, and stand upon the king;	44: the only way the rebels have been able to restock their supplies is to take them by force ( perforce ).
44	So what is brought is sent from them perforce ;	= for confirmation. <sup>1</sup>
	Ask Mannering else .
46	Kendal. What sayest thou, Mannering?
48	Mann. Whenas I shewed your high commissiön ,	49-51: Mannering has apparently already attempted, and failed, to collect provisions from the residents of Bradford. Kendal had tried to impress the people by having Mannering show them an "official" requisition (a high commission ) for supplies.
50	They made this answer,	shewed = common alternate form of showed .
	Only to send provision for your horses.
52	Kendal. Well, hie thee to Wakefield , bid the town	53: hie thee = hurry. Wakefield = cathedral city located about 20 miles south-east of Bradford. bid = ask.
54	To send me all provision that I want,	55-57: a nod to the ferocious and uncompromising late-14th century conqueror of Asia (properly Tamur or Tamerlane), made famous in England by Christopher Marlowe in the pair of plays he wrote about the warrior in the 1580's.
56	Lest I, like martial Tamburlaine, lay waste	That = who.
	Their bordering countries, and leaving none alive
	That contradicts my commission.	= ie. "I'll take care of it".
58	Mann. Let me alone , my lord,

60 62 64 66 68 70 72 74	I'll make them vail their plumes; For whatsoe'er he be, the proudest knight, Justice, or other, that gainsayeth your word, I'll clap him fast, to make the rest to fear. Kendal. Do so, Nick: hie thee thither presently, And let us hear of thee again to-morrow. Mann. Will you not remove, my lord? Kendal. No, I will lie at Bradford all this night And all the next. – Come, Bonfield, let us go, And listen out some bonny lasses here. [Exeunt.]	= ie. submit; a common expression literally meaning "lower their plumes (the feathers on their hats or helmets)", ie. "remove their hats". = whosoever. = ie. even the. = ie. "who speaks against or refuses your order".<sup>1</sup> = ie. (arrest and) incarcerate him promptly.<sup>1</sup> = ie. in order to. = "hurry over there right away". = from. = leave, ie. move the army to a new location. = find news of or inquire about;<sup>1,3</sup> the expression, perhaps a variation of the more common "listen after", appears to be unique to this play.
ACT I, SCENE II.	ACT I, SCENE II.	Setting: as noted above, Wakefield sits about 20 miles south-east of Bradford.
At Wakefield.	At Wakefield.	Entering Characters: we join the town meeting of the city of Wakefield in progress. Mannering, representing the rebels, has just presented Kendal's ultimatum to the residents: they must either hand over all the provisions that have been requested, or suffer the pillaging of their homes.
Enter the Justice, Townsmen, George-a-Greene, and Sir Nicholas Mannering with his commission.	Enter the Justice, Townsmen, George-a-Greene, and Sir Nicholas Mannering with his commission.	Mannering's threat is in the form, in part, of a commission, a written authorization stamped with the wax seals of Kendal, Armstrong and Bonfield, the leaders of the rebellion.
1 Just. Master Mannering, stand aside, whilst we confer 2 What is best to do. – Townsmen of Wakefield, The Earl of Kendal here hath sent for victuals;	1 Just. Master Mannering, stand aside, whilst we confer 2 What is best to do. – Townsmen of Wakefield, The Earl of Kendal here hath sent for victuals;	Present in the crowd is George-a-Greene (who we will refer to in the notes simply as George), a legendary English figure, known for his fierce fighting ability and his loyalty to his sovereign. The name of the town's Justice is Woodroffe. = food and other supplies;<sup>1</sup> in the History, we are told that the commission specifically required the townsmen to turn over to Mannering corn, cattle, and cash, the latter to be used to pay the soldiers.
4 And in aiding him we shew ourselves no less Than traitors to the king; therefore 6 Let me hear, townsmen, what is your consents.	4 And in aiding him we shew ourselves no less Than traitors to the king; therefore 6 Let me hear, townsmen, what is your consents.	= ie. "show", here and everywhere. = opinion; note the clause's lack of agreement between the subject and verb, a common feature of Elizabethan writing.
8 Ist Towns. Even as you please, we are all content.	8 Ist Towns. Even as you please, we are all content.	8: the townsmen are of the same mind as the Justice.
10 Just. Then, Master Mannering, we are resolved –	10 Just. Then, Master Mannering, we are resolved –
12 Mann. As how?	12 Mann. As how?

14 Just. Marry, sir, thus.
 We will send the Earl of Kendal no victuals,
 16 Because he is a traitor to the king;
 And in aiding him we shew ourselves no less.

18 Mann. Why, men of Wakefield, are you waxen mad,
 20 That present danger cannot whet your wits,
 Wisely to make provision of yourselves?

22 The earl is thirty thousand men strong in power,
 And what town soever him resist,
 24 He lays it flat and level with the ground.
Ye silly men, you seek your own decay:
 26 Therefore
 Send my lord such provision as he wants,
 28 So he will spare your town,
 And come no nearer Wakefield than he is.

30 Just. Master Mannering, you have your answer;
 32 You may be gone.

34 Mann. Well, Woodroffe, for so I guess is thy name,
 I'll make thee curse thy overthwart denial;
 36 And all that sit upon the bench this day shall rue
 The hour they have withstood my lord's commission.

38 Just. Do thy worst, we fear thee not.

40 Mann. See you these seals? before you pass the town,
 42 I will have all things my lord doth want,
 In spite of you.

44 George. Proud dapper Jack, vail bonnet to the bench
 46 That represents the person of the king;
 Or, sirrah, I'll lay thy head before thy feet.

48 Mann. Why, who art thou?

50 George. Why, I am George-a-Greene,
 52 True liege-man to my king,

= a common oath. = as follows.

17: the Justice repeats his statement of line 4 above.
no less = ie. to be traitors also.

= grown.

Lines 19-21: note the extended alliteration of w- words.

20-21: ie. "does not the immediate (present) threat of harm focus your intellect, leading you to do what is necessary to ensure your town's safety?"

whet = sharpen.

22: the History tells us that the rebel-army was comprised of 20,000 men.

= plural form of you. = stupid. = destruction.<sup>2</sup>

35: the sense is, "you will curse the day you made this perverse or hostile (overthwart)<sup>1</sup> refusal."

= Mannering tries to impress upon the townspeople the authority and power of the commission, which has impressed on it the seals of the rebellion's three primary leaders (Kendal, Armstrong and Bonfield).

45f: George-a-Greene steps forward now to take on the burden of dealing with the traitor Mannering.

45: "you arrogant (Proud) and petty fellow, remove your hat before the Justice."

dapper = trim and neat, but with a deprecatve sense, suggesting smallness.

Jack = generic name for a male.

vail = lower.

47: "or I will slice your head off."

sirrah = term of address used to signal an assumption of authority and contempt.<sup>1</sup> = loyal subject.

	Who scorns that men of such esteem as these	= ie. the residents of Wakefield generally, and perhaps the Justice specifically.
54	Should brook the braves of any traitorous squire . –	54: brook the braves = (be forced to) endure the blustering threats. <sup>1</sup> squire = lad (contemptuous).
56	You of the bench, and you, my fellow-friends, Neighbours, we subjects all unto the king; We are English born, and therefore Edward's friends.	= this is the first mention of the English king's name. 58: hyperbolically, "sworn to be loyal to him even before we were born".
58	Vowed unto him even in our mothers' womb, Our minds to God, our hearts unto our king:	59: this line sounds proverbial, but is actually unique to this play. = always stressed on its first syllable. = bodies.
60	Our wealth, our homage , and our carcasses , Be all King Edward's. – Then, sirrah, we 62 Have nothing left for traitors, but our swords, 64 Whetted to bathe them in your bloods, and die Against you, before we send you any victuals.	= sharpened. = ie. fighting against.
66	Just. Well spoken, George-a-Greene!
68	Ist Towns. Pray let George-a-Greene speak for us.	= please.
70	George. Sirrah, you get no victuals here, Not if a hoof of beef would save your lives.	71: in the History , George also snatches Mannering's hat from off his head, stomps on it, and kicks it away.
72	Mann. Fellow, I stand amazed at thy presumption. 74 Why, what art thou that darest gainsay my lord , Knowing his mighty puissance and his stroke ?	= who. = deny or contradict. = ie. Kendal. 75: puissance = power or army. <sup>1</sup> his stroke = perhaps, "the strength of Kendal's arm", or "the might with which he wields a sword."
76	Why, my friend, I come not barely of myself ; For, see, I have a large commissiõn.	= "solely on my own behalf or authority"
78	George. Let me see it, sirrah .
80	[Takes the commission].
82	Whose seals be these?
84	Mann. This is the Earl of Kendal's seal-at-arms; 86 This Lord Charnel Bonfield's; And this Sir Gilbert Armstrong's.
88	George. I tell thee, sirrah, did good King Edward's son 90 Seal a commission 'gainst the king his father, Thus would I tear it in despite of him, 92 [Tears the commission.]	= ie. "even if Edward's son did". = ie. tear it up.
94	Being traitor to my sovereign.
96	Mann. What, hast thou torn my lord's commission? 98 Thou shalt rue it, and so shall all Wakefield.
100	George. What, are you in choler ? I will give you pills	= irritable, in a rage, impatient. <sup>1,2</sup>

102 To cool your stomach. Seest thou these seals?
 Now, by my father's soul,
 Which was a yeoman when he was alive,
 104 Eat them, or eat my dagger's point, proud squire.
 106 Mann. But thou dost but jest, I hope.
 108 George. Sure that shall you see before we two part.
 110 Mann. Well, and there be no remedy, so, George:
 112 [Swallows one of the seals.]
 114 One is gone; I pray thee, no more now.
 116 George. O, sir,
 If one be good, the others cannot hurt.
 118 So sir;
 120 [Mannering swallows the other two seals.]
 122 Now you may go tell the Earl of Kendal,
 Although I have rent his large commission,
 124 Yet of courtesy I have sent all his seals
Back again by you.
 126 Mann. Well, sir, I will do your errand.
 128 [Exit Mannering.]
 130 George. Now let him tell his lord that he hath spoke 132 With George-a-Greene,
Right Pinner of merry Wakefield town,
 134 That hath physic for a fool,
 Pills for a traitor that doth wrong his sovereign. –
 136 Are you content with this that I have done?
 138 Just. Ay, content, George;
 For highly hast thou honoured Wakefield town
 140 In cutting off proud Mannering so short.
 Come, thou shalt be my welcome guest to-day;
 142 For well thou hast deserved reward and favour.
 144 [Exeunt.]

ACT I, SCENE III.

In Westmoreland.

= considered the seat of emotions.<sup>1</sup>
 = an oath.
 = who. = land-holding farmer, hence of a respectable position.<sup>1,2</sup>
 = a threat to stab the knight.
 = ie. "you will see if I am joking".
 = if. = ie. no other path, no way to repair the situation.

= please.

= torn.
 = ie. out of.
 = in return.

133: Right = Dyce likely correctly emends Right to Hight, meaning "called", "named".

Pinner = official charged with "impounding stray animals" (OED); also called a pinder.

= medicine.
 = do injury or insult to.

136: Greene addresses the Justice or his fellow townsmen.

Setting: Westmoreland is a county in north-west England, its northern border located about 60 miles south of Scotland. It is also about 100 miles north-west of Wakefield and the other towns in which much of our play takes place.

Enter Musgrove and Cuddy.

1 Cuddy. Now, gentle father, list unto thy son,
2 And for my mother's love,
That erst was blithe and bonny in thine eye,

4 Grant one petition that I shall demand.

6 Musgr. What is that, my Cuddy?

8 Cuddy. Father, you know
The ancient enmity of late
10 Between the Musgroves and the wily Scots,

Whereof they have oath
12 Not to leave one alive that strides a lance.

O father,
14 You are old, and waning age unto the grave:
Old William Musgrove, which whilom was thought 16 The bravest horseman in all Westmoreland,
Is weak,
18 And forced to stay his arm upon a staff,
That erst could wield a lance.
20 Then, gentle father, resign the hold to me;

Give arms to youth, and honour unto age.

22 Musgr. Avaunt, false-hearted boy! my joints do quake
24 Even with anguish of thy very words.
Hath William Musgrove seen an hundred years?

26 Have I been feared and dreaded by the Scots,
That, when they heard my name in any road,
28 They fled away, and posted thence amain,
And shall I die with shame now in mine age?
30 No, Cuddy, no: thus resolve I,
Here have I lived, and here will Musgrove die.

32

[Exeunt.]

ACT I, SCENE IV.

At Bradford.

Enter Lord Bonfield, Sir Gilbert Armstrong,

Entering Characters: Musgrove is an Englishman, Cuddy his son; though not a knight or any higher rank, Musgrove is a landowner, and, more importantly, a fierce warrior.

= listen to.

= ie. in memory of, or something similar.

3: "who previously (when she was alive) you found to be merry and attractive".

= request. = ask.

9-10: Cuddy describes the hatred between his family and the Scots as both longstanding (ancient) and recent (of late).

Dyce, recognizing line 9 to be both awkwardly phrased and short, asks if the line should end with, of late revived, meaning, "recently revived".

12-13: the Scots have sworn to kill even the children of the Musgrove clan.

strides a lance = allusion to a child running with a lance between his or her legs as if it were a hobby horse.<sup>3</sup> strides = ie. bestrides.<sup>1</sup>

= ie. nearing death; waning = declining.

= once upon a time.<sup>1</sup> = accounted.

= rest. = walking stick.

= who once.

20: Cuddy asks his father to turn over to him ownership of the family property (the hold)!

= let the young fight, and the old, in retirement, be held in reverence.

= be gone! = disloyal, faithless.

25: Musgrove claims to be 100 years old! It is no wonder Cuddy is impatient to receive his inheritance.

= ie. anytime they raided England; road = inroad.<sup>3</sup>

= rode quickly away, ie. back to Scotland.

Setting: while Mannering has gone to squeeze supplies out of the residents of Wakefield, the rebel army remains at Bradford.

Entering Characters: unlike the citizens of Wakefield,

Grime, and Bettris (his daughter).

1 Bonf. Now, gentle Grime, God-a-mercy for our good cheer;

2 Our fare was royal, and our welcome great:
And sith so kindly thou hast entertained us,

4 If we return with happy victory,
We will deal as friendly with thee in recompense.

6
8 Grime. Your welcome was but duty, gentle lord;
For wherefore have we given us our wealth,
But to make our betters welcome when they come?

10 [Aside]. O, this goes hard when traitors must be flattered!
But life is sweet, and I cannot withstand it:
12 God, I hope, will revenge the quarrel of my king.

14 Armstr. What said you, Grime?

16 Grime. I say, Sir Gilbert, looking on my daughter,
I curse the hour that e'er I got the girl;
18 For, sir, she may have many wealthy suitors,
And yet she disdains them all,
20 To have poor George-a-Greene unto her husband.

22 Bonf. On that, good Grime, I am talking with thy daughter;
But she, in quirks and quiddities of love,
24 Sets me to school, she is so over-wise. – who refuse to do business or succour the rebels, Grime, a man of otherwise no particular account, has provided a nice meal for the leaders of the insurrection.

Bettris is Grime's attractive daughter.

1: God-a-mercy = thank you.
cheer = food, meal.

= since. = welcomed and fed.<sup>1</sup>

4-5: if the rebellion is successful, the nobles will return to Bradford to reward their host.
happy = fortunate.

= ie. done in duty.

8-9: ie. "why else have men been given possessions, except to share them with their superiors when the opportunity to do so arises?"

10-12: Grime lets the audience know that he is actually loyal to the crown; however, by welcoming the rebel leaders into his home and feeding them (in order to avoid any retribution should he have refused), Grime has shown himself to be a weak and unsympathetic character.

this goes hard = "things have come to a bad state", a common expression.

withstand it = ie. avoid engaging in such flattery.

Grime is described with a bit more sympathy in the History, which tells us that he was "forced" to provide entertainment to the rebel leaders "much against his will".

14: we find here an interesting variation on the conventional asides found in abundance in Elizabethan plays: normally, when a character speaks an "aside", the stage-action's time, as it were, stops: the speech is made to let the audience know what is really going on the character's mind. When the speaker completes the aside, he or she returns to the time and place of the scene, and the dialogue and action resume.

In this play, however, many of the asides operate in an interesting hybrid manner: while the audience would hear the speech clearly, the other characters on stage also hear the aside, but the words come across to them as an indistinct mumble, as if the lines were filtered through a hazy aural medium. Look for this effect to be repeated several times in George-a-Greene.

= begot, ie. sired, brought into the world.<sup>1</sup>

= ie. could.

= ie. in preference for.

Lines 16-20: in the History, Grime (called Grymes) is a wealthy Justice of the Peace, and it is because George is of lesser rank, as well as of little means, that Bettris' father refuses to consent to her marrying the Pinner.

= ie. on that subject.

23-24: Bonfield is frustrated in his wooing of Bettris, who is playing hard-to-get; Bettris is no dumb peasant girl: she will prove herself to be willful and strong of character, and able

26 But, gentle girl, if thou wilt forsake the Pinner
 And be my love, I will advance thee high;
 To dignify those hairs of amber hue,
 28 I'll grace them with a chaplet made of pearl,
 Set with choice rubies, sparks, and diamonds,
 30 Planted upon a velvet hood, to hide that head
 Wherein two sapphires burn like sparkling fire:
 32 This will I do, fair Bettris, and far more,
 If thou wilt love the Lord of Doncaster.
 34
 36 Bettris. Heigh-ho! my heart is in a higher place, Perhaps on the earl, if that be he. –

 See where he comes, or angry, or in love,
 38 For why his colour looketh discontent.

 40 Enter the Earl of Kendal and Sir Nicholas Mannering.
 42 Kendal. Come, Nick, follow me.
 44 Bonf. How now, my lord! what news?
 46 Kendal. Such news, Bonfield, as will make thee laugh,
And fret thy fill, to hear how Nick was used.

 48 Why, the Justices stand on their terms:
 Nick, as you know, is haughty in his words;
 50 He laid the law unto the Justices
With threatening braves, that one looked on another, 52 Ready to stoop; but that a churl came in,

 One George-a-Greene, the Pinner of the town, to handle herself quite well with men.

quirks and quiddities = idiosyncrasies, a common expression.
Sets me to school = presumes to instruct Bonfield about love. The expression, to set one to school, metaphorically meaning "to provide an education for", was a common one.
she is so over-wise = Bettris is affectedly clever, ie. she acts smarter than she is.<sup>1</sup>

 = "raise you in rank", "promote you to a higher status".
 = Bettris' golden hair.<sup>1</sup>
 = coronet.<sup>1</sup>
 = small diamonds or other gems.<sup>1,3</sup>
 30: note the wordplay with hood, hide and head.
 = ie. her eyes.

 = ie. Bonfield himself; Kendal had promised this title to Bonfield should the insurrection succeed.

 35-36: Bettris toys with Bonfield: she suggests she may prefer a man of higher rank.
Heigh-ho = an expression used to express yawning or jadedness.<sup>1</sup>
if that be he = Bettris hears Kendal arriving.

 = here, there. = ie. "either he is".

 38: Kendal appears emotional or flushed, without his normal calm demeanor; it turns out he has been enjoying a hearty laugh.

 46-58: to his credit, Kendal sees the humour in Mannering's failed attempt to intimidate the townsmen of Wakefield.
 47: And fret thy fill = perhaps, "as well as enrage you".
used = treated.

 = remained inflexible in their refusal.<sup>1</sup>
 = speaks in a high-handed manner.

 = with such blustering threats.

 52: Mannering has told Kendal that the townsmen were prepared to cave (Ready to stoop) to their demands, at least until George stepped in, when in reality, the Justice and the town's residents had refused to accede to his demands from the first. Mannering is likely trying to save at least a portion of face in front of his boss, given his failure to overawe his victims.
Ready to stoop = literally, prepared to bow down, ie. submit.
churl = villain.

54	And with his dagger drawn laid hands on Nick,	= another exaggeration: while George certainly threatened to slay Mannering, there was no indication in Scene II that George had physically assaulted him.
	And by no beggars swore that we were traitors,	= literally, "swore by no mean people" (Collins, p. 369); a common expression used to emphasize the trustworthiness of one's oath.
56	Rent our commission, and upon a brave Made Nick to eat the seals or brook the stab:	= tore up. = with a threat. 57: forced Mannering to choose between eating the seals or being killed; brook = endure.
58	Poor Mannering, afraid, came posting hither straight .	= riding back here quickly.
60	Bettris. O lovely George, fortune be still thy friend!
62	And as thy thoughts be high , so be thy mind In all accords, even to thy heart's desire!	61-62: roughly, just as George's thoughts are high-minded and noble ( high ) <sup>1</sup> , so may he attain whatever he desires; but the lines, as Dyce suggests, are potentially corrupted, as thoughts and mind are synonymous.
64	Bonf. What says fair Bettris?	64: "what did you say?"
66	Grime. My lord, she is praying for George-a-Greene: He is the man, and she will none but him.	= ie. will have none.
68	Bonf. But him! why, look on me, my girl:
70	Thou know'st that yesternight I courted thee, And swore at my return to wed with thee.	= last night.
72	Then tell me, love, shall I have all thy fair ?	= "possess all thy beauty?"
74	Bettris. I care not for earl, nor yet for knight, Nor baron that is so bold;
76	For George-a-Greene, the merry Pinner, He hath my heart in hold .	= imprisoned or in his custody. <sup>1</sup>
78	Bonf. Bootless , my lord, are many vain replies:	79: Bonfield's attempts to persuade Bettris are fruitless ( Bootless ); vain = unprofitable. <sup>1</sup>
80	Let us hie us to Wakefield, and send her the Pinner's head.	= hurry.
82	Kendal. It shall be so. – Grime, gramercy , Shut up thy daughter, bridle her affects ;	= thanks; but note that Kendal's words of gratitude are followed by a not-so-vague threat. 83: "confine your daughter, and curb her desires." <sup>1</sup> affects = affections. <sup>4</sup>
84	Let me not miss her when I make return ; Therefore look to her, as to thy life, good Grime.	= get back.
86	Grime. I warrant you, my lord.	85: "watch her, as you would guard your life, Grimes." = assure.
88	Kendal. And, Bettris,
90	Leave a base Pinner, for to love an earl.	= in order to.
92	[ Exeunt Grime and Bettris. ]
94	Fain would I see this Pinner George-a-Greene. It shall be thus:	= gladly.
96	Nick Mannering shall lead on the battle , And we three will go to Wakefield in some disguise:	= the army (in Kendal's absence). = ie. Kendal, Armstrong and Bonfield.

98 | But howsoever, I'll have his head to-day.

| = nonetheless, ie. one way or another.

100

| [Exeunt.]

END OF ACT I.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

Before Sir John-a-Barley's Castle.

Enter James (King of Scots), Lord Humes, with Soldiers, and John.

1 K. James. Why, Johnny, then the Earl of Kendal is blithe,
2 And hath brave men that troop along with him?

4 John. Ay, marry, my liege,
And hath good men that come along with him,
6 And vows to meet you at Scrasblesea, God willing.

8 K. James. If good Saint Andrew lend King Jamy leave,
I will be with him at the 'pointed day.

10 Enter Ned.

12 But, soft! – Whose pretty boy art thou?

14 Ned. Sir, I am son unto Sir John-a-Barley, 16 Eldest, and all that e'er my mother had;
Edward my name.

18 K. James. And whither art thou going, pretty Ned?

20 Ned. To seek some birds, and kill them, if I can:
22 And now my schoolmaster is also gone,
So have I liberty to ply my bow;
24 For when he comes, I stir not from my book.

26 K. James. Lord Humes, but mark the visage of this child:
By him I guess the beauty of his mother;

28 None but Leda could breed Helena. –

Setting: the scene takes place on the lands fronting the home of the English knight, Sir John-a-Barley, who himself does not appear in the play. Based on some lines spoken in the play's final scene, the Barley castle may be identified with Middleham Castle in North Yorkshire, which is about 10 miles south of Richmond; another line suggests the castle is in Aske, a parish sitting a mile north of Richmond.

Entering Characters: the Scottish king James, we remember, is working in concert with the English rebels to vex the English crown with an invasion of the northern counties. James enters the stage with one of his nobles, Lord Humes (who speaks no lines in the play), and his servant John, who has just returned from his errand to assure Kendal and the rebels that he is on their side.

John is not to be confused with John-a-Barley, the owner of the castle before the Scottish forces.

= pleased or merry.<sup>1</sup>

2: James is inquiring as to whether Kendal appears to have enough support to succeed in his objective.

troop = march, ie. travel.<sup>1</sup>

= this location has never been identified.<sup>5</sup>

= patron saint of Scotland. = "grants me permission".
= ie. appointed.

Entering Character: Ned is the young son of the Barley household; Ned, of course, is a nickname for Edward.

= wait a moment.

16: the eldest son, and the only child of the family.

= to where.

22-24: when Ned's stern private tutor is away from the castle, Ned feels free to attend to his preferred activities, such as hunting; when the tutor is home, Ned dares not lift his head from his studies.

ply = bend.<sup>1</sup>

= note, observe. = face.

27: James judges that because the lad is so attractive, his mother must be too.

28: an analogy: only a woman as beautiful as Leda could have given birth to a girl who was as similarly lovely as was Helen of Troy.

Tell me, Ned, who is within with thy mother?

30
 32 Ned. Nought but herself and household servants, sir:
 If you would speak with her, knock at this gate.

34 K. James. Johnny, knock at that gate.

36 [John knocks at the gate.]

38 Enter Jane-a-Barley upon the walls.

40 Jane. O, I'm betrayed! What multitudes be these?

42 K. James. Fear not, fair Jane, for all these men are mine,
 And all thy friends, if thou be friend to me:

44 I am thy lover, James the King of Scots,
 That oft have sued and wooed with many letters,
 46 Painting my outward passions with my pen,
Whenas my inward soul did bleed for woe.
 48 Little regard was given to my suit;

But haply thy husband's presence wrought it:

50 Therefore, sweet Jane, I fitted me to time,
 And, hearing that thy husband was from home,
 52 Am come to crave what long I have desired.

54 Ned. Nay, soft you, sir! you get no entrance here,
 That seek to wrong Sir John-a-Barley so,
 56 And offer such dishonour to my mother.

58 K. James. Why, what dishonour, Ned?

60 Ned. Though young,
 Yet often have I heard my father say,
 62 No greater wrong than to be made [a] cuckold.
 Were I of age, or were my body strong,

Leda was a queen of Sparta; she was famously raped by the king of the gods Jupiter (who had taken the form of a swan for the purpose), and gave birth to, among others, Helen, who would become the most beautiful woman in the world, Helen of Troy.

= ie. inside.

Though it is not clear from this speech or the ensuing dialogue, James has specifically led his army to this castle in order to pay a visit to the lady of the house, Ned's mother Jane. While James may not have initially recognized who Ned was, the king has deduced, based on the lad's attractive looks and response to his query, that he is Jane's son.

= the quarto prints Not, emended as shown by Dickinson.
 = wish to.

38: Ned's mother Jane appears on the rear balcony of the stage, which often doubled for the walls of a palace or castle.

40: Jane is dismayed to find an entire army in front of her home, but why she feels betrayed is as yet unclear.

43: James hints, a bit cryptically, that if Jane gives herself to him, then she will suffer no harm at the hands of the army.

= the one who loves Jane, or has been courting her.
 = often.
 = depicting.
 = while.

48: Jane has ignored James' pleas.

49: perhaps (haply) it is Jane's husband who has prevented her from responding to James; the king gives the lady the benefit of the doubt.

50-52: James asserts that he has arranged specifically to visit Jane at the castle once he learned that John-a-Barley was away.
I fitted me to time = "I adapted to, or took advantage of, the situation".

= hold on one moment!

55: ie. by cheating with his wife.

= ie. there is no. = insult, injury.
 63: ie. "if I were older and bigger".

64	Were he ten kings , I would shoot him to the heart That should attempt to give Sir John the horn . –	= ie. "any man, even if he were the equal of ten kings". = commit adultery with Sir John's wife; the expression refers to the common conceit that horns grow out of the forehead of a cuckolded man.
66	Mother, let him not come in: I will go lie at Jocky Miller's house.	67: Ned is clever: if the castle entrance – a portcullis, most likely, not a simple and flimsy front door – were opened up, it would give James an opportunity to enter the castle as well.
68	K. James. Stay him.	69: "stop or grab the boy."
70	Jane. Ay, well said; Ned, thou hast given the king his answer;
72	For were the ghost of Caesar on the earth, Wrapped in the wonted glory of his honour,	72-74: ie. Jane would not permit even the greatest ruler in all of history to seduce her. wonted = accustomed.
74	He should not make me wrong my husband so. –
76	But good King James is pleasant, as I guess, And means to try what humour I am in; Else would he never have brought an host of men,	75: perhaps James is simply being droll or merry. = test. = mood. = army.
78	To have them witness of his Scottish lust.
80	K. James. Jane, in faith , Jane, –	= truly, really.
82	Jane. Never reply, For I protest by the highest holy God,	= profess.
84	That doometh just revenge for things amiss, King James, of all men, shall not have my love.	84: who, acting as a judge, punishes those who commit wicked deeds and such. doometh = sentences. <sup>1</sup>
86	K. James. Then list to me: Saint Andrew be my boot ,	= listen. = ie. the sense is, "St. Andrew help me".
88	But I'll raze thy castle to the very ground, Unless thou open the gate, and let me in.
90	Jane. I fear thee not, King Jamy: do thy worst. This castle is too strong for thee to scale; Besides, to-morrow will Sir John come home.	= note how Jane signals her scorn for James by addressing him with the informal and insulting term thee instead of you .
94	K. James. Well, Jane, since thou disdain'st King James's love, I'll draw thee on with sharp and deep extremes; For, by my father's soul, this brat of thine Shall perish here before thine eyes, Unless thou open the gate, and let me in.	96: "I will have to adopt extraordinary measures to lure you out."
96	Jane. O deep extremes ! my heart begins to break: My little Ned looks pale for fear. – Cheer thee , my boy, I will do much for thee.	= Jane repeats James' words from line 96 above. = ie. take heart. = ie. "I would do anything".
100	Ned. But not so much as to dishonour me.
102	Jane. And if thou diest, I cannot live, sweet Ned.	= if.
104	Ned. Then die with honour, mother, dying chaste.
106
108
110

112 Jane. I am armed:
 My husband's love, his honour, and his fame,
 114 Joins victory by virtue. – Now, King James,
 If mother's tears cannot allay thine ire,
 Then butcher him, for I will never yield:
 116 The son shall die before I wrong the father.

118 K. James. Why, then, he dies.

120 Alarum within.
Enter a Messenger.

122 Mess. My lord, Musgrove is at hand.

124 K. James. Who, Musgrove? The devil he is! Come, my horse!

126 [Exeunt.]

ACT II, SCENE II.

The Same, before Sir John-a-Barley's Castle.

*Enter Musgrove with King James prisoner;
 Jane-a-Barley on the walls.*

1 Musgr. Now, King James, thou art my prisoner.
 2

4 K. James. Not thine, but Fortune's prisoner.
 6 Enter Cuddy.

8 Cuddy. Father, the field is ours:
Their colours we have seized, and Humes is slain;

10 I slew him hand to hand.

12 Musgr. God and Saint George!

14 Cuddy. O father, I am sore athirst!

Jane. Come in, young Cuddy, come and drink thy fill:

= reputation.
 113: "(together act to) combine victory with virtue."<sup>1</sup>
 = "mitigate your fury".

120: a call-to-arms sounds off-stage.

123: nearby.

125: immediately dropping his attempts to seduce Jane, King James prepares to meet the Scots' ancient enemy, the centenarian Musgrove.

Scene II: a battle between the forces of the English warrior Musgrove and the Scottish army of King James took place between Scenes I and II; the English victorious, Musgrove has taken James prisoner.

We may wonder at the efficacy of the Scottish army, which allowed itself to be defeated by what could not have been a very large force.

Entering Characters: we met Musgrove, an Englishman ready to do battle with any aggressive Scotsman he meets, in Act I.iii; his son Cuddy, we remember, had wanted his father to retire and turn the family property over to him, and Musgrove told him basically to go to the devil; they seem to have made up.

3: James ascribes his capture not to the martial abilities of his opponent, but to bad luck.

= ie. victory.

8: Their colours...seized = the worst humiliation a defeated army could endure was to have its battle flags and national banners captured.

Humes = the nobleman who appeared on-stage with James in the last scene, but spoke no lines.

= ie. in a one-on-one, or single, combat.

11: traditional English battle-cry.

= oppressively thirsty.

16 Bring in King Jamy with you as a guest;
For all this broil was 'cause he could not enter.

18 [Jane exits above; exeunt below, the others.]

ACT II, SCENE III.

At Wakefield.

Enter George-a-Greene.

1 George. The sweet content of men that live in love
2 Breeds fretting humours in a restless mind;

4 And fancy, being checked by fortune's spite,
Grows too impatient in her sweet desires;

6 Sweet to those men whom love leads on to bliss,
But sour to me whose hap is still amiss.

8 Enter Jenkin.

10 Jenkin. Marry, amen, sir.

12 George. Sir, what do you cry "amen" at?

14 Jenkin. Why, did not you talk of love?

16 George. How do you know that?

18 Jenkin. Well, though I say it that should not say it, there are few fellows in our parish so nettled with love
20 as I have been of late.

22 George. Sirrah, I thought no less, when the other morning you rose so early to go to your wenches. Sir, I 24 had thought you had gone about my honest business.

26 Jenkin. Trow, you have hit it; for, master, be it known to you, there is some good-will betwixt Madge the 28 souce-wife and I; marry, she hath another lover.

16-17: Jane is deliciously ironic.

17: this whole turmoil (broil) was caused by Jane refusing entry to James.

Entering Character: George-a-Green begins the scene with a short soliloquy: loves brings happiness to those who may enjoy its fruits, but frustration to those who are unable to attain the objects of their desire.

1-2: love disrupts a man's peace of mind, because it causes him to suffer from a consuming vexation.

humours = any of the four fluids (blood, phlegm, black bile and yellow bile) which, in medieval thinking, were believed, based on the relative proportion with which they existed in the body, to determine a person's temperament.

3-4: when personified Fortune prevents one from attaining his or her love, one must endure intolerable longing.

5-6: love brings happiness to those who are successful in love, but not to George, whose luck (hap) is against him. Note the author's employment of the still-familiar contrast between sweet and sour.

Entering Character: Jenkin is a servant of George's.

You may wish to note how Jenkin's speeches are typical of those of the Elizabethan low-ranking comic figure, full of absurdities and self-contradictions.

10: "Goodness, amen to that, sir!" Jenkin has overheard George's lament.

= ie. "I who"; Jenkin excuses his seemingly boastful comments here.<sup>1</sup> = stirred.<sup>1</sup>

22-24: George correctly discerned that Jenkin had been visiting his girlfriends when he should have been working.

Sirrah = correct form of address for one's servant.

= "believe me". = "you are correct in your assessment."

= "there is a mutual understanding between", or "there are shared feelings between".

= woman who pickles, preserves, and then sells various parts of an animal,<sup>1</sup> or who sells such pickling brine.<sup>15</sup>

30 George. Can'st thou brook any rivals in thy love?

32 Jenkin. A rider! no, he is a sow-gelder and goes afoot. But Madge 'pointed to meet me in your wheat-

34 close.

36 George. Well, did she meet you there?

38 Jenkin. Never make question of that. And first I

40 saluted her with a green gown, and after fell as hard awoeing as if the priest had been at our backs to have married us.

42 George. What, did she grant?

44 Jenkin. Did she grant! never make question of that.

46 And she gave me a shirt-collar wrought over with no

48 counterfeit stuff.

50 George. What, was it gold?

52 Jenkin. Nay, 'twas better than gold.

54 George. What was it?

56 Jenkin. Right Coventry blue. We had no sooner come

58 there but wot you who came by?

60 George. No: who?

62 Jenkin. Clim the sow-gelder.

64 George. Came he by?

66 Jenkin. He spied Madge and I sit together: he leapt from his horse, laid his hand on his dagger, and began

68 to swear. Now I seeing he had a dagger, and I nothing but this twig in my hand, I gave him fair words and said nothing. He comes to me, and takes me by the 70 bosom. "You whoreson slave," said he, "hold my horse, and look he take no cold in his feet." "No, marry, shall he, sir," quoth I; "I'll lay my cloak

= tolerate.

32: A rider! = Jenkin seems to have misheard George, perhaps thinking George had said riders (one who rides about on a horse) instead of rivals. The joke is mysteriously lame, but perhaps is a set-up for Jenkin's speech of lines 64f below, in which he humorously contradicts his assertion here.

sow-gelder = one who spays sows.

33: 'pointed = appointed, ie. had an appointment.

33-34: wheat-close = an enclosed wheat-field.<sup>1</sup>

= "do not doubt it."

39: saluted...gown = expression meaning that Jenkin threw Madge to the ground in an aggressive bit of love-making, so as to stain her gown on the grass.<sup>1,7</sup>

saluted = honoured or welcomed.<sup>1</sup>

39-40: after fell...woeing = began to beg Madge, with great intensity, to marry him.

= accept or agree to marry Jenkin.

= made or comprised of.

55: Coventry blue = the city of Coventry was a center for the dying of blue thread.<sup>8</sup>

= to this point, ie. Madge had accepted. = know.

64: sit = sitting.

64-65: he leapt...horse = Jenkin contradicts his own assertion of lines 32-33 above that the sow-gelder travels afoot.

= spoke pleasantly to him.

= son of a b*tch.

= "make sure his feet do not get cold."

71-73: I'll lay...midst of it = Jenkin is clever: he will prevent

72	underneath him." I took my cloak, spread it all along, and [set] his horse on the midst of it.	the feet of the horse from getting cold (due to their resting on the dirt) by having it stand on his cloak.
74
76	George. Thou clown , didst thou set his horse upon thy cloak?	= ignoramus. <sup>1</sup>
78	Jenkin. Ay, but mark how I served him . Madge and he was no sooner gone down into the ditch, but I plucked out my knife, cut four holes in my cloak, and made his horse stand on the bare ground.	= "note how I dealt with him."
80
82	George. 'Twas well done. Now, sir, go and survey my fields: if you find any cattle in the corn, to pound with them.	78-81: the joke is on Clim after all.
84		= examine, take a look around. <sup>1</sup>
86	Jenkin. And if I find any in the pound, I shall turn them out.	84-85: to pound with them = "impound them"; it is George's job, we remember, to detain trespassing animals in the pound, an enclosed area used specifically for holding beasts.
88		87-88: turn them out = drive them out, ie. release them; a typical absurdity from Jenkin.
90	[Exit Jenkin.]
92	Enter the Earl of Kendal, Lord Bonfield, Sir Gilbert Armstrong, all disguised, with a train of men.	Entering Characters: Kendal and company have arrived in Wakefield to complete their announced mission of cutting off George's head.
94		train = retinue, party; the History tells us the rebel leaders were accompanied on this errand by forty of their men.
96	Kendal. Now we have put the horses in the corn, Let us stand in some corner for to hear What braving terms the Pinner will breathe When he spies our horses in the corn.	96: the nobles have set their three horses into the cornfield for the purpose of grabbing George's attention. = in order to.
98		98: what kind of threats George will offer.
100	[Retires with the others.]	braving terms = blustering words.
102	Re-enter Jenkin blowing his horn.	101: the rebels withdraw, so that they cannot be seen by either George or Jenkin.
104	Jenkin. O master, where are you? we have a prize.	103: Jenkin, having seen the trespassing horses, raises an alarm.
106	George. A prize! what is it?
108	Jenkin. Three goodly horses in our wheat-close.
110	George. Three horses in our wheat-close! whose be they?
112	Jenkin. Marry, that's a riddle to me; but they are there; velvet horses , and I never saw such horses before. As my duty was , I put off my cap, and said as followeth: " My masters , what do you make in our close?" One of them, hearing me ask what he made there, held up his head and neighed, and after his manner laughed as heartily as if a mare had been tied to his girdle . "My masters," said I, "it is no laughing	= horses caparisoned in velvet cloth, which suggests their owners are men of wealth and high standing. <sup>3</sup> = ie. "as it was my job to do". = removed. = respectful form of address. = "what are you doing".
114
116
118		119-120: laughed...girdle = the horse's laughter suggested he was as happy as if a she-horse had been attached to his belt ( girdle )!
120 matter; for, if my master take you here, you go as 122 round as a top to the pound." Another untoward jade, 123 hearing me threaten him to the pound and to tell you of 124 them, cast up both his heels, and let such a monstrous

125 great fart, that was as much as in his language to say,
126 "A fart for the pound, and a fart for George-a-Greene!"
127 Now I, hearing this, put on my cap, blew my horn,
128 called them all jades, and came to tell you.

130 George. Now, sir, go and drive me those three horses to the pound.

132 Jenkin. Do you hear? I were best to take a constable
133 with me.

136 George. Why so?

138 Jenkin. Why, they, being gentlemen's horses, may stand on their reputation, and will not obey me.

140 George. Go, do as I bid you, sir.

142 Jenkin. Well, I may go.

144 *The Earl of Kendal, Lord Bonfield,
145 and Sir Gilbert Armstrong come forward.*

148 Kendal. [To Jenkin] Whither away, sir?

150 Jenkin. Whither away! I am going to put the horses in the pound.

152 Kendal. Sirrah, those three horses belong to us,
153 And we put them in,
154 And they must tarry there and eat their fill.

156 Jenkin. Stay, I will go tell my master. – Hear you, 157 master? we have another prize: those three horses be in 158 your wheat-close still, and here be three geldings
159 more.

162 George. What be these?

164 Jenkin. These are the masters of the horses.

166 George. Now, gentlemen (I know not your degrees,
But more you cannot be, unless you be kings,)

121: take = catches.

121-2: as round as a top = perhaps meaning "most assuredly"; the expression was usually used to describe how round something was, or how something was spinning, but the use here is unique, most likely employed by the not-so-bright Jenkin so as to create a rhyme for pound.

= difficult, stubborn. = opprobrious name for a horse; hack.

= ie. "drive"; here is an example of a linguistic conceit known as the ethical dative, common in the era's writing: the superfluous me suggests an extra interest in the speaker to see the action completed.

= ie. "weren't you listening?" = "it would be better".

138-9: Jenkin asserts the horses may adopt for themselves the high ranks of their owners, and consequently refuse to follow any orders issued by him, a lowly servant.

= ask.

= to where.

= remain. = ie. of wheat.

= castrated horses.

= who.

166-7: George chooses not to insult the nobles, assuming them to be of some higher rank, and addresses them accordingly.

degrees = ranks.

168	Why wrong you us of Wakefield with your horses? I am the Pinner, and, before you pass,
170	You shall make good the trespass they have done.	= pay for or atone for.
172	Kendal. Peace, saucy mate, prate not to us: I tell thee, Pinner, we are gentlemen.	172: "be quiet, impertinent fellow, and stop prattling at us."
174
176	George. Why, sir, So may I, sir, although I give no arms.	176: "I can also call myself a gentleman, though I do not wear a coat of arms." Any man who had achieved the rank of gentleman could apply for a coat of arms.
178	Kendal. Thou! how art thou a gentleman?	= "how do you figure yourself to be".
180	Jenkin. And such is my master, and he may give as good arms as ever your great-grandfather could give.	180-1: Jenkin plays along with George's claim.
182
184	Kendal. Pray thee , let me hear how.	= please.
186	Jenkin. Marry, my master may give for his arms the picture of April in a green jerkin , with a rook on one fist and an horn on the other: but my master gives his arms the wrong way, for he gives the horn on his fist ; and your grandfather, because he would not lose his arms, wears the horn on his own head .	= wear for his coat of arms. = image. = a short jacket. = crow. = wears, displays. = ie. which is wrong because it should be on his forehead.  = ie. the grandfather is a cuckold; Jenkin's description is utter nonsense, but the last clause returns to the familiar gag about the man who has been cuckolded growing horns on his forehead.
188
190
192	Kendal. Well, Pinner, sith our horses be in , In spite of thee they now shall feed their fill, And eat until our leisures serve to go.	= since. = ie. in the field.  = "it is our pleasure", ie. "it is convenient for us". <sup>1</sup>
194
196	George. Now, by my father's soul, Were good King Edward's horses in the corn, They shall amend the scath , or kiss the pound;	= ie. "even if" 198: shall amend the scath = would pay for the damage. kiss = "be placed in", a common metaphoric use of kiss .
198
	Much more yours, sir, whatsoe'er you be.	199: "this applies even more so to you, whoever you are (ie. and you are not the king)."
200
202	Kendal. Why, man, thou knowest not us: We do belong to Henry Momford, Earl of Kendal; Men that, before a month be full expired, Will be King Edward's betters in the land.	= serve.
204		204: euphemism for deposing the king.
206	George. King Edward's better[s]! Rebel, thou liest!
208		208: the History tells us that George specifically struck Kendal "with his staff a sound blow betwixt his neck and shoulders."
210	Bonf. Villain, what hast thou done? thou hast stroke an earl.	= ie. struck, a common alternate form.
212	George. Why, what care I? a poor man that is true , Is better than an earl, if he be false .	= loyal (to the king). = disloyal.
214	Traitors reap no better favours at my hands.

216	Kendal. Ay, so methinks; but thou shalt dear aby this blow. – Now or never lay hold on the Pinner!	= pay a high price for.
218	[ All the train comes forward. ]	219: the entire raiding party comes forward to seize or attack George.
220	George. Stay, my lords, let us parley on these broils :	221: George asks Kendal to wait a moment, and to talk this over. parley = negotiate, a term typically used to describe a meeting between the leaders of warring factions, especially before or during a battle. on these broils = about this quarrel.
222	Not Hercules against two, the proverb is, Nor I against so great a multitude. –	222: it was proverbial to observe that even Hercules would not take on two adversaries at one time.
224	[ Aside ]. Had not your troops come marching as they did, I would have stopped your passage unto London:	224-5: had the balance of the forces not descended on George, he would have thrashed the three men before him.
226	But now I'll fly to secret policy.	226: George has a new expedient to which to turn.
228	Kendal. What dost thou murmur, George?	228: George's aside was heard, albeit indistinctly, by Kendal.
230	George. Marry, this, my lord; I muse ,	= wonder, ponder.
232	If thou be Henry Momford, Kendal's earl, That thou wilt do poor George-a-Greene this wrong, Ever to match me with a troop of men.	232-3: "it would be unfair of you to force me to fight against such a large group of men at once."
234	Kendal. Why dost thou strike me, then?
236	George. Why, my lord, measure me but by yourself:	237: ie. "judge my action by what you would have done if you were in my position."
238	Had you a man had served you long, And heard your foe misuse you behind your back, And would not draw his sword in your defence, You would cashier him.	= mistreat. = dismiss.
242	Much more, King Edward is my king: And before I'll hear him so wronged, I'll die within this place, And maintain good whatsoever I have said.	244-5: "I will die defending Edward, and back up fully ( maintain good ) what I say."
246	And, if I speak not reason in this case, What I have said I'll maintain in this place.	= unreasonably.
248	Bonf. A pardon, my lord, for this Pinner;
250	For, trust me, he speaketh like a man of worth.	249: Bonfield, impressed, asks Kendal to forgive George.

252	Kendal. Well, George, Wilt thou leave Wakefield and wend with me,	= "if you will". = go.
254	I'll freely put up all and pardon thee.	= Kendal will have everyone return their swords to their scabbards.
256	George. Ay, my lord, considering me one thing , You will leave these arms , and follow your good king.	= ie. "(I will do this) if you will do this one thing". = ie. cease this rebellion.
258	Kendal. Why, George, I rise not against King Edward,
260	But for the poor that is oppressed by wrong;
262	And, if King Edward will redress the same, I will not offer him disparagement ,	= disgrace the king. <sup>2</sup>
264	But otherwise; and so let this suffice.
264	Thou hear'st the reason why I rise in arms:
266	Now, wilt thou leave Wakefield and wend with me, I'll make thee captain of a hardy band,
266	And, when I have my will , dub thee a knight.	= ie. when the rebellion has succeeded, and Kendal, now crowned king, can do as he wishes.
268
270	George. Why, my lord, have you any hope to win?	= expectation.
272	Kendal. Why, there is a prophecy doth say, That King James and I shall meet at London,
274	And make the king vail bonnet to us both.	= remove his hat as a sign of submission, <sup>1</sup> a common expression; vail = lower. Kendal interprets the prediction to mean that he will become the king.
		Lines 271-3: it was a popular tradition to include in a play a prophecy which was then only ironically fulfilled in the play's climax, ie. a prediction which came true, but in a manner contrary to the expectations of the subject of the prediction.
276	George. If this were true, my lord, This were a mighty reason.
278	Kendal. Why, it is A miraculous prophecy, and cannot fail.
280
282	George. Well, my lord, you have almost turned me. – Jenkin, come hither.	= convinced.
284	Jenkin. Sir?
286	George. Go your ways home, sir, And drive me those three horses home unto my house,
288	And pour them down a bushel of good oats.	= ie. "feed them".
290	Jenkin. Well, I will. – [ Aside ]. Must I give these scurvy horses oats?	290-1: Jenkin is confused by George's seeming willingness to appease the rebels.
292
294	[ Exit Jenkin. ]
296	George. Will it please you to command your train aside?	295: George asks Kendal to ask his men to retire.
298	Kendal. Stand aside.
300	[ The train retires. ]

302 George. Now list to me:  Here in a wood, not far from hence,  There dwells an old man in a cave alone,  304 That can foretell what fortunes shall befall you,  For he is greatly skilful in magic art.  306 Go you three to him early in the morning,  And question him: if he says good,  308 Why, then, my lord, I am the foremost man  Who will march up with your camp to London. 310 Kendal. George, thou honourest me in this.  312 But where shall we find him out? 314 George. My man shall conduct you to the place;  But, good my lord, tell me true what the wise man saith. 316 Kendal. That will I, as I am Earl of Kendal. 318 George. Why, then, to honour George-a-Greene the more,  320 Vouchsafe a piece of beef at my poor house;  You shall have wafer-cakes your fill, 322 A piece of beef hung up since Martlemas: If that like you not, take what you bring, for me. 324 Kendal. Gramercies, George. 326 [Exeunt.] END OF ACT II.	= listen.  = here. = ie. "if his prediction is in your favour".  = first.  = (campaigning) army.<sup>1</sup> = ie. "find him". = ie. Jenkin.  = ie. "report back to me truthfully regarding". = deign (to take).  = thin cakes or wafers.<sup>1</sup> 322: Martlemas (November 11, the date of the Feast of St. Martin, hence properly called Martinmas) was the customary time to hang up for the winter those provisions that had been salted for preservation.<sup>8</sup> 323: ie. "if what I have does not please you, you can eat whatever you bring with you." The expression is repeated more fully later at Act IV.iv.87. = thank you.
---	---

ACT III.

SCENE I.

Before Grime's house in Bradford.

Enter George-a-Greene's boy Wily, disguised as a woman.

1 Wily. O, what is love! it is some mighty power,
2 Else could it never conquer George-a-Greene. –
Here dwells a churl that keeps away his love:

4 I know the worst, and if I be espied,
'Tis but a beating; and if I by this means

6 Can get fair Bettris forth her father's door,
It is enough. –

8 Venus, for me, of all the gods alone,
10 Be aiding to my wily enterprise!

[Wily knocks at the door.]

Enter Grime.

14 Grime. How now! who knocks there? what would you have?

16 From whence came you? where do you dwell?

18 Wily. I am, forsooth, a sempster's maid hard by,
20 That hath brought work home to your daughter.

22 Grime. Nay, are you not
Some crafty quean that comes from George-a-Greene,
That rascal, with some letters to my daughter?
24 I will have you searched.

26 Wily. Alas, sir, it is Hebrew unto me

Setting: we have met Grime, who lacked the courage to resist the rebelling nobles when they came to ask him for food. George is in love with Grime's daughter Bettris.

Entering Character: Wily is a younger lad, also a servant of George-a-Greene's. Wily would be young enough to be without facial hair, so as to be able to impersonate a girl more convincingly.

Wily begins the scene with a brief soliloquy, in which he explains his reason for donning the disguise.

= otherwise.

= base fellow, ie. Grime. = keeps Bettris away from George.

4-5: I know...beating = if Grimes figures out that the figure before him is a young man, then the worst that can happen is the old man will thrash Wily.

and if = ie. if.

= out and away from Grime's house.

7: we may note that Wily is generously acting out this scheme on behalf of his master without the latter's knowledge. His devotion to George must be great, as he would even risk a beating to help George out.

8-9: Wily (punning on his name) asks for assistance from Venus, the goddess of love, before implementing his plan.

of all the gods alone = the quarto prints and all goes alone here, emended by Dyce as shown; Collins suggests and all the gods above.

15: what would you have = "what do you want?"

= from where.

= truly. = seamstress'. = from (ie. who lives) nearby.

19: the History tells us that Wily (called William or Willy) brought samples of work to show Bettris, presumably to sell to her if she were interested.

= sneaky whore.

21-24: interestingly, Grime is highly suspicious of his visitor, expecting "she" is a spy sent by George, but never imagining that "she" is really a boy.

= ie. "I do not know what you are talking about", a common variation on the still-familiar expression, "it is Greek to me."

28	To tell me of George-a-Greene or any other! Search me, good sir, and if you find a letter	= speak to me.
30	About me , let me have the punishment that's due.	= "on my person".
32	Grime. Why are you muffled? I like you the worse for that.	= Wily's face is concealed. = less.
34	Wily. I am not, sir, ashamed to shew my face; Yet loth I am my cheeks should take the air:	= ie. show, as always.
36	Not that I'm chary of my beauty's hue, But that I'm troubled with the toothache sore.	= (particularly) careful regarding.
38	[Unmuffles.]
40	Grime. [Aside] A pretty wench, of smiling countenance! Old men can like, although they cannot love;	43: Grime may mean that old men need more time to seduce young ladies.
42	Ay, And love, though not so brief as young men can. –
44	Well, Go in, my wench , and speak with my daughter.	= lass, not a derogatory term.
46	[Exit Wily into the house.]
48	I wonder much at the Earl of Kendal, Being a mighty man, as still he is, Yet for to be a traitor to his king, Is more than God or man will well allow. But what a fool am I to talk of him! My mind is more here of the pretty lass. Had she brought some forty pounds to town, I could be content to make her my wife: Yet I have heard it in a proverb said, He that is old and marries with a lass, Lies but at home, and proves himself an ass.	49-52: a rather awkward and pointless digression.  = ie. thinking about, occupied with. = ie. if his visitor had had a decent dowry.
60	Enter, from the house, Bettris in Wily's apparel.	57-59: the previous editors have not identified any such proverb. <sup>3</sup> 58-59: a young wife is bound to roam about and cheat on her older husband.
62	How now, my wench! how is't? – what, not a word? – Alas, poor soul, the toothache plagues her sore . – Well, my wench, Here is an angel for to buy thee pins ,	61: a convention of Elizabethan drama allowed characters in disguise to remain unrecognized, even by their own close kin!  63: Bettris does not respond to Grime's query. = troubles. = greatly.
68	[Gives money.]	66: angel = English gold coin bearing the image of St. Michael slaying the dragon. pins = a common gift for a 16th century girl.
70	And I pray thee use mine house; The oftener, the more welcome: farewell.	70: "please feel free to take advantage of my hospitality any time."
72	[Exit Grime.]
74	Bettris. O blessèd love, and blessèd fortune both! – But, Bettris, stand not here to talk of love,	75-76: it was a common feature of Elizabethan plays for characters to pause to speak their thoughts aloud for the benefit of the audience, then immediately reproach

78 But hie thee straight unto thy George-a-Greene:
Never went roe-buck swifter on the downs
80 Than I will trip it till I see my George.

[Exit.]

ACT III, SCENE II.

A Wood near Wakefield.

Enter the Earl of Kendal, Lord Bonfield, Sir Gilbert Armstrong, and Jenkin.

1 Kendal. Come away, Jenkin.

2
3 Jenkin. Come, here is his house.

4
5
6 [Knocks at the door.]

7
8 – Where be you, ho?

9 George. [Within] Who knocks there?

10
11 Kendal. Here are two or three poor men, father,
12 would speak with you.

13
14 George. [Within]
Pray, give your man leave to lead me forth.

15
16 Kendal. Go, Jenkin, fetch him forth.

17
18 [Jenkin leads forth George-a-Greene disguised.]

19
20 Jenkin. Come, old man.

21
22 Kendal. Father,
23 Here is three poor men come to question thee
24 A word in secret that concerns their lives.

25
26 George. Say on, my son.

27
28 Kendal. Father, I am sure you hear the news,
29 How that the Earl of Kendal wars against the king.
30 Now, father, we three are gentlemen by birth,
31 But younger brethren that want revenues,

32
33
34 And for the hope we have to be preferred,
If that we knew that we shall win, themselves for wasting time speaking instead of acting.

= rush right away.

= the male of the species of deer known as the roe. = hills.

= go.<sup>1</sup>

Entering Characters: at the direction of George, Jenkin is leading the three leaders of the insurrection to the seer in order to ask him to predict if the rebellion will meet with success or not.

3: at Act II.iii.303, George had stated that the seer lives in a cave.

9: George answers the knock from off-stage.

11-12: the rebels pretend to be non-entities who are trying to decide if they should tie their fortunes to the insurrectionist army.

15: George, who is pretending to be blind, asks that Jenkin be allowed to come inside to guide him out of house.

31-32: it was normal in older times for the eldest son to inherit the family fortune, leaving younger siblings to find their own ways in the world. Kendal claims he and his associates are such impoverished younger brothers (brethren).

want revenues = lack income.

= promoted in status or raised in condition.

36	We will march with him : if not, We will not march a foot to London more.	= ie. Kendal.
38	Therefore, good father, tell us what shall happen, Whether the king or the Earl of Kendal shall win.
40	George. The king, my son.
42	Kendal. Art thou sure of that?
44	George. Ay, as sure as thou art Henry Momford, The one Lord Bonfield, the other Sir Gilbert [Armstrong].
46	Kendal. Why, this is wondrous, being blind of sight, His deep perceiverance should be such to know us.	= perception. = recognize.
50	Armstr. Magic is mighty and foretelleteth great matters. – Indeed, father, here is the earl come to see thee, And therefore, good father, fable not with him .	= "do not tell him any lies."
54	George. Welcome is the earl to my poor cell , And so are you, my lords; but let me counsel you To leave these wars against your king, And live in quiet.	= humble dwelling. = abandon.
58	Kendal. Father, we come not for advice in war, But to know whether we shall win or leese .	= lose. <sup>1</sup>
62	George. Lose, gentle lords, but not by good King Edward; A baser man shall give you all the foil .	= "defeat you."
64	Kendal. Ay, marry, father, what man is that?
66	George. Poor George-a-Greene, the Pinner.
68	Kendal. What shall he?	= ie. "what will he do?"
70	George. Pull all your plumes , and sore dishonour you.	71: Pull...plumes = common metaphor for "bring you low"; a reference to the plucking of a peacock's feathers: in Shakespeare's Henry VI, Part I , Joan of Arc says, " We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train (ie. tail)." sore = greatly; sore was commonly used an adverb.
72
74	Kendal. He! as how? George. Nay, the end tries all ; but so it will fall out.	= this expression (which this play appears to have introduced into English literature) seems to have been used to suggest that it is a venture's conclusion, rather than its beginning, that should be used to measure its level of success; or, it may simply mean, "we will see what happens."
76	Kendal. But so it shall not, by my honour Christ . I'll raise my camp , and fire Wakefield town, And take that servile Pinner George-a-Greene, And butcher him before King Edward's face.	= a unique oath. = "rouse my army to action". = burn. = menial, slave-like. <sup>1</sup>
80
82	George. Good my lord , be not offended, For I speak no more than art reveals to me:	82-83: Kendal should not direct his ire at the old man, who, after all, is only the messenger. Good my lord = alternate wording for "my good lord", used frequently in verse because it better fits a line of iambic

84 And for greater proof,
 Give your man leave to fetch me my staff.
 86
Kendal. Jenkin, fetch him his walking-staff.
 88
Jenkin. [Giving it] Here is your walking-staff.
 90
George. I'll prove it good upon your carcasses;
 92 A wiser wizard never met you yet,
 Nor one that better could foredoom your fall.
 94
 Now I have singled you here alone,
 I care not though you be three to one.
 96
Kendal. Villain, hast thou betrayed us?
 98
George. Momford, thou liest, ne'er was I traitor yet;
 100 Only devised this guile to draw you on
 For to be combatants.
 102 Now conquer me, and then march on to London:
But shall go hard but I will hold you task.
 104
Armstr. Come, my lord, cheerly, I'll kill him hand to hand.
 106
Kendal. A thousand pound to him that strikes that stroke!
 108
George. Then give it me, for I will have the first.
 110

[Here they fight;
George kills Sir Gilbert Armstrong, and takes the other two prisoners.]
 112
 114
Bonf. Stay, George, we do appeal.
 116
George. To whom?
 118
Bonf. Why, to the king:
 120 For rather had we bide what he appoints,
 Then here be murthered by a servile groom.
 122
Kendal. What wilt thou do with us?
 124
George. Even as Lord Bonfield wist,
 126 You shall unto the king: and, for that purpose, meter.

art = astrology, magic.

84: ie. "and to provide further evidence that I speak the truth."
 = permission. = walking-stick.

= predict, presage,<sup>1</sup> a great word.

94-95: George's scheme now becomes clear: he has staged this entire charade for the purpose of getting the three leaders of the rebellion alone, so as to meet them in a fair fight, without their being backed up by any of their fellow-insurrectionists.

= misled.<sup>1</sup>

= trick, act of deceit.<sup>1</sup> = lead.

101: ie. "in order to fight you."

103: "it may go badly, but I will hold you to this."

But = Collins emends But to It.

115: Bonfield and Kendal submit.

120-1: the nobles would rather be sentenced to death by the king – as befits their rank – then be ignobly slain by a commoner!

bide = endure.<sup>1</sup>

murthered = ie. murdered, a common alternate form.

= desires.

= ie. "shall go to"; note the common early grammatical construction here: in the presence of a word of intent (shall), the word of movement (go) may be omitted.

128 See where the Justice is placed.

130 Enter Justice.

132 Just. Now, my Lord of Kendal, where be all your threats?
Even as the cause, so is the combat fallen,
Else one could never have conquered three.

134 Kendal. I pray thee, Woodroffe, do not twit me;
136 If I have faulted, I must make amends.

138 George. Master Woodroffe, here is not a place for many words:
I beseech ye, sir, discharge all his soldiers,
140 That every man may go home unto his own house.

142 Just. It shall be so. What wilt thou do, George?

144 George. Master Woodroffe, look to your charge;
Leave me to myself.

146 Just. Come, my lords.

148

[Exeunt all except George.]

ACT III, SCENE III.

A Wood near Wakefield.

George-a-Greene still on-stage.

1 George. Here sit thou, George, wearing a willow wreath,

2 As one despairing of thy beauteous love: –
Fie, George! no more;

4 Pine not away for that which cannot be.
I cannot joy in any earthly bliss,
6 So long as I do want my Bettris.

8 Enter Jenkin.

10 Jenkin. Who see a master of mine?

12 George. How now, sirrah! whither away?

14 Jenkin. Whither away! why, who do you take me to be?

16 George. Why, Jenkin, my man.

18 Jenkin. I was so once indeed, but now the case is 20 altered.

127: "here comes the judge!"

129: the setting may change seamlessly to Wakefield proper, or, the Justice might simply be opportunely strolling by.

131: the Justice taunts Kendal.
132: the rebellion has failed with the conclusion of this fight.

= mock.
= sinned, transgressed.

139-140: typically, only the leaders of an Elizabethan stage-rebellion could expect to be punished; the followers, no matter how numerous, would generally be pardoned if they returned home peacefully.

= ie. "concern yourself with your own affairs."

Setting: the action returns to the woods outside of town.

= it was customary to wear a garland of willow as the traditional symbol of lost love.

3-6: George reproves himself for submitting to such maudlin thoughts.
= "do not waste away" (from grief).
= take pleasure.
= lack, go without.

= "has anyone seen".

= correct form of address to a servant. = "where are you going?"<sup>1</sup>

19-20: the case is altered = the situation has changed, ie.
Jenkin is no longer George's servant!

22	George. I pray thee , as how?	= ie. "please tell me".
24	Jenkin. Were not you a fortune-teller to-day?
26	George. Well, what of that?
28	Jenkin. So sure am I become a juggler . What will you say if I juggle your sweetheart?	= magician. = conjure up. <sup>1</sup>
30	George. Peace, prating lose! her jealous father	= "be quiet, you chattering scoundrel!" <sup>2</sup>
32	Doth wait over her with such suspicious eyes,	= watches. <sup>1</sup>
34	That, if a man but dally by her feet, He thinks it straight a witch to charm his daughter.	= hangs about, flirts. <sup>2</sup> 34: the first thing that comes to Grime's mind is that the man is a sorcerer trying to seduce Bettris.
36	Jenkin. Well, what will you give me, if I bring her hither ?	= here.
38	George. A suit of green, and twenty crowns besides.
40	Jenkin. Well, by your leave , give me room . You must	= "with your permission". = space.
42	give me something that you have lately worn.
44	George. Here is a gown, will that serve you ?	= ie. "serve your purpose".
46	[George gives gown.]
48	Jenkin. Ay, this will serve me. Keep out of my circle ,	= Jenkin draws a conjuring circle; a sorcerer typically performed his feats while standing in a circle to protect him from evil spirits.
50	Lest you be torn in pieces with she-devils. – Mistress Bettris, once, twice, thrice!	= by.
52	[Jenkin throws the gown in, and Bettris comes out.]	52: Jenkin may throw the gown into the circle, which may surround the stage's trap door, allowing Bettris to rise up and "magically" appear before her lover; or, Jenkin, from within the circle, may toss the gown off-stage, from which Bettris can simply walk in.
54	Oh, is this no cunning?	= ie. is this not.
56	George. Is this my love, or is it but her shadow ?	= shade, apparition.
58	Jenkin. Ay, this is the shadow, but here is the substance.	58-59: Jenkin likely points first to the literal shadow Bettris casts on the ground, then to Bettris herself.
60	George. Tell me, sweet love,
62	What good fortune brought thee hither? For one it was that favoured George-a-Greene.
64	Bettris. Both love and fortune brought me to my George, In whose sweet sight is all my heart's content.	66: Bettris needs only to see George to be content.
68	George. Tell me, sweet love, how cam'st thou from thy father's?
70	Bettris. A willing mind hath many slips in love: It was not I, but Wily, thy sweet boy.	70: when one is in love, one can come up with any number of expedients to reach one's lover. slips = perhaps "acts of stealing off". <sup>1</sup>
72	George. And where is Wily now?

74 Bettris. In my apparel, in my chamber still.
76
78 George. Jenkin, come hither: go to Bradford,
And listen out your fellow Wily. –
Come, Bettris, let us in,
80 And in my cottage we will sit and talk.

= clothes. = bedroom.

= inquire about, find out what is happening to.<sup>1</sup>

= ie. go in.

82 [Exeunt.]

END OF ACT III.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

London, the Court of King Edward.

Enter King Edward, James (King of Scots), Lord Warwick, Cuddy, and Train.

- 1 K. Edw. Brother of Scotland, I do hold it hard,
- 2 Seeing a league of truce was late confirmed
"Twixt you and me, without displeasure offered
4 You should make such invasion in my land.
- 6 The vows of kings should be as oracles,
Not blemished with the stain of any breach;
Chiefly where fealty and homage willeth it.

Setting: King Edward's exact location is somewhat unclear: Dickinson places the scene at "The Camp of King Edward", which makes sense, suggesting as it does that the king has left London to head north to deal with the insurrection and the Scottish invasion. However, there is no indication in the play itself that suggests specifically that Edward is removed from London.

On the other hand, we find, later in this scene, James welcoming Kendal "to the court" (line 120), and in the play's final scene, Edward states that he travelled north specifically to meet George-a-Greene, a plan he does not devise until the end of the present scene.

The puzzle arises because in the History, the English king was Richard I, who had just returned from several years of Crusading, and is only just learning about the rebellion in the north. Thus, naturally, he is in his court in London, and we are told that he is considering ways to raise money to pay for an army to suppress the insurrection when he learns it has already been quashed.

In our play, on the other hand, Edward does not really have any excuse for still being in London. Needless to say, our authors did not really worry about such minor details, and so, while inconsistencies of continuity are always worth noting (see, for example, lines 102*f* below), they are never worth worrying about for us as readers either.

Entering Characters: we finally meet King Edward, who is attended by Lord Warwick.

At this point, the king is not aware that the rebellion has been put down, thanks to the ministrations of George-a-Greene.

Musgrove, meanwhile, having captured King James of Scotland, has sent his son Cuddy to deliver his royal prisoner to King Edward's hands.

1: Brother = the usual term of address between kings.

I do hold it hard = "I consider this to be ill-advised or bad form"; the expression hold it hard is a unique one.

2-4: given the recent peace treaty signed between the two nations, Edward is (naturally) displeased that James has invaded England without Edward's having done anything to provoke it.

5-7: a monarch should consider any promise he or she makes as sacred, not to be stained by any failure to follow through on it, especially when made by a sovereign who is, feudally speaking, a vassal of another (as James is to Edward, or at least as the latter believes).

oracles = utterances of infallible truth or wisdom.<sup>1</sup>

fealty and homage = fealty was a vow not to do harm to one's lord; homage was a ceremony in which a vassal, or subject, acknowledged that his position was held at the sufferance of his lord.<sup>10</sup> Throughout the pre-unification

8

K. James. Brother of England, rub not the sore afresh;
My conscience grieves me for my deep misdeed.

10

12

I have the worst; of thirty thousand men,
There 'scaped not full five thousand from the field.

14

K. Edw. Gramercy, Musgrove, else it had gone hard:

16

Cuddy, I'll quite thee well ere we two part.

18

K. James. But had not his old father, William Musgrove, Played twice the man, I had not now been here.

20

A stronger man I seldom felt before;
But one of more resolute valiance,
Treads not, I think, upon the English ground.

22

K. Edw. I wot well, Musgrove shall not lose his hire.

24

Cuddy. And it please your grace, my father was Five-score and three at midsummer last past:

26

Yet had King Jamy been as good as George-a-Greene,

28

Yet Billy Musgrove would have fought with him.

30

K. Edw. As George-a-Greene!
I pray thee, Cuddy, let me question thee.

32

Much have I heard, since I came to my crown,
Many in manner of a proverb say,

34

"Were he as good as George-a-Greene, I would strike him sure:"

36

I pray thee, tell me, Cuddy, canst thou inform me,
What is that George-a-Greene?

38

Cuddy. Know, my lord, I never saw the man,
But mickle talk is of him in the country:

40

They say he is the Pinner of Wakefield town:
But for his other qualities, I let alone.

42

history of England and Scotland, English monarchs continuously attempted to force their Scottish counterparts to accept the English kings as their overlords.

9-10: James asks his fellow-king not to remind him of his transgression, of which he is already deeply ashamed.

11-12: James, we remember, was captured when a band of English warriors, led by the English patriot Musgrove, surprised James and his army while the Scottish were camped near Sir John-a-Barley's castle; the nature of the battle has been transmuted into a major slaughter of Scottish soldiers, as James claims to have lost 25,000 men; as a means of comparison, the Scottish lost perhaps 17,000 warriors to the English in 1513 at Flodden, the bloodiest battle ever actually fought on British soil.<sup>11</sup> have the worst = ie. came off the worst.

14: without Musgrove's role in the battle, things would have gone worse for the English.

Gramercy = thanks.
= reward. = before.

18: Played...man = fought as hard as two men.

I had...here = "I would not be in this situation (ie. a royal prisoner)."

= the quality of being valiant; an uncommon word today, but one appearing not infrequently in the 16th and early 17th centuries.

= know. = ie. miss out on his reward; the king is droll.

25-26: Cuddy claims his father is 103 years old!

And it = if it.

27: had = even if.

as good as George-a-Greene = ie. as fierce a fighter as is George-a-Green; this common proverb appeared in print for the first time in 1590.

= ie. William Musgrove, Cuddy's father.

= almost as if it were proverbial.

34: sure = assuredly, for sure.<sup>1</sup>

= who.

= much.

= ie. "I will not speak of them."<sup>1</sup>

44 Warwick. May it please your grace, I know the man too well.

46 K. Edw. Too well! why so, Warwick?

48 Warwick. For once he swinged me till my bones did ache.

50 K. Edw. Why, dares he strike an earl?

52 Warwick. An earl, my lord! nay, he will strike a king,
Be it not King Edward. For stature he is framed
Like to the picture of stout Hercules,

54 And for his carriage passeth Robin Hood.

56 The boldest earl or baron of your land,
That offereth scath unto the town of Wakefield,
George will arrest his pledge unto the pound;

58 And whoso resisteth bears away the blows,
For he himself is good enough for three.

60 K. Edw. Why, this is wondrous: my Lord of Warwick,
62 Sore do I long to see this George-a-Greene. –
But leaving him, what shall we do, my lord,
64 For to subdue the rebels in the north?
They are now marching up to Doncaster. –

66 Enter one with the Earl of Kendal prisoner.

68 Soft! who have we there?

70 Cuddy. Here is a traitor, the Earl of Kendal.

72 K. Edw. Aspiring traitor! how dar'st thou
74 Once cast thine eyes upon thy sovereign
That honoured thee with kindness, and with favour?
76 But I will make thee buy this treason dear.

78 Kendal. Good my lord, –

80 K. Edw. Reply not, traitor. –
Tell me, Cuddy, whose deed of honour
82 Won the victory against this rebel?

84 Cuddy. George-a-Greene, the Pinner of Wakefield.

86 K. Edw. George-a-Greene! now shall I hear news

= thrashed; this is the only time in the play any mention has been made of George beating Warwick. The backstory is never provided.

52: Be it not = "so long as he is not".

52-53: For stature...Hercules = in build he resembles the great mythological hero.

framed = formed, shaped.

Like to = ie. like.

picture = image.

stout = brave.

= bearing or demeanor. = "(he) surpasses".

55-57: "should the greatest peer of England attempt to do injury (offereth scath) to Wakefield (by letting his animal commit trespass), George will seize the animal and impound it."

arrest his pledge = seize the animal as a security or surety.<sup>1</sup>

59: George is a great enough fighter to take on, and defeat, three men at one time.

= greatly.

= but putting that topic aside.

= in order to.

= town about 20 miles south-east of Wakefield.

= a man.

= wait a moment!

= who (previously).

76: Kendal will pay dearly for his treason.

84ff: a minor miscue, perhaps: if Cuddy knew that George had put down the insurrection, wouldn't he have mentioned it to the king earlier than this?

88	Certain, what this Pinner is. Discourse it briefly, Cuddy, how it befell.	= who. = recount. <sup>2</sup>
90	Cuddy. Kendal and Bonfield, with Sir Gilbert Armstrong, Came to Wakefield town disguised,	91: the leaders had dressed as commoners.
92	And there spoke ill of your grace; Which George but hearing, felled them at his feet,	= knocked them down.
94	And, had not rescue come unto the place, George had slain them in his close of wheat.	94-95: Cuddy misrepresents George's role in the story, making him appear even fiercer than he already really is. unto = frequently used, as here, to mean "into". had = would have.
96
98	K. Edw. But, Cuddy, Canst thou not tell where I might give and grant Something that might please	99-100: briefly, "a reward to this George?"
100	And highly gratify the Pinner's thoughts?
102	Cuddy. This at their parting George did say to me:  "If the king vouchsafe of this my service , Then, gentle Cuddy, kneel upon thy knee, And humbly crave a boon of him for me."	102f: a continuity error: Cuddy told Edward at line 38 above that he has never seen George-a-Greene. = "graciously accepts what I have done".  = ask a favour.
104
106
108	K. Edw. Cuddy, what is it?
110	Cuddy. It is his will your grace would pardon them , And let them live, although they have offended .	= ie. the rebel leaders. = transgressed.
112	K. Edw. I think the man striveth to be glorious . – Well, George hath craved it, and it shall be granted, Which none but he in England should have gotten. –	= "conspicuously honourable" (OED, def. 3b).  = no one.
114	Live, Kendal, but as prisoner, So shalt thou end thy days within the Tower.
116
118	Kendal. Gracious is Edward to offending subjects.
120	K. James. My Lord of Kendal, you're welcome to the court.	120: the line can interpreted in multiple ways: (1) now that Kendal is to be spared execution, James formally welcomes him; (2) even if Edward is not pleased to see Kendal, James – to whom Kendal was allied – is; or (3) James dryly welcomes Kendal as a fellow-prisoner of Edward's. We note that in the History , these welcoming words are spoken jeeringly by the English king: see the note at line 126 below.
122	K. Edw. Nay, but ill-come as it falls out now;	122: "actually, his arrival is unfortunate or unwelcome, as events turned out." ill-come = ill being the opposite of well , ill-come would logically be the opposite of welcome .
	Ay,
124	Ill-come indeed, were't not for George-a-Greene. –	124: Kendal's arrival would have been unwelcome indeed, were it not for George – because the earl would have entered the court intending to overthrow Edward.

But, gentle king, for so you would aver,

126 And Edward's betters, I salute you both,

And here I vow by good Saint George,

128 You will gain but little when your sums are counted.

I sore do long to see this George-a-Greene:
 130 And for because I never saw the north,
 I will forthwith go see it;
 132 And for that to none I will be known,
 We will disguise ourselves and steal down secretly,
 134 Thou and I, King James, Cuddy, and two or three,
 And make a merry journey for a month. –
 136 Away, then, conduct him to the Tower. –
 Come on, King James, my heart must needs be merry, 138 If Fortune makes such havoc of our foes.

140 [Exeunt.]

ACT IV, SCENE II.

Robin Hood's Retreat.

Enter Robin Hood, Maid Marian, Scarlet, and Much the Miller's son.

125-6: Edward mildly mocks his prisoners here.
would aver = claim to be.

126: Edward's betters = ie. referring to the rebels; Kendal had vowed that he and his fellows would become Edward's betters at Act II.iii.204 above.

I salute you both = Edward mockingly welcomes his prisoners. In the History, we are told that the English king (Richard I, and not Edward) "in mere derision veiled his bonnet" to Kendal, and "said withal, 'My lord, you are welcome to London," thus fulfilling the prophesy (see Act II.iii.271-3) upon which the entire rebellion was based!

= England's patron saint.

128: a commercial metaphor: "for all your work, you see that, when you add up your money, you have made little profit," ie. the rebels have little to show for all their efforts.

129: Edward practically repeats his wish of line 62 above.
 = ie. northern England.

= immediately, without delay.

= "and so that no one will recognize me".

= ie. Kendal.

Setting: with King James, the Scottish invasion, and the rebellion of the northern lords dispensed with, the play transitions to a new story-line.

Entering Characters: we meet Robin Hood and the famous band of outlaws known as his "merry men". Among Robin Hood's well-known companions are Will Scarlet and Much the Miller's Son, as well as Robin's romantic interest, Maid Marion.

The earliest known literary references to Robin Hood date from the late 14th century; the home of the band varied depending on the story, but several legends described Robin Hood as a native of Yorkshire,<sup>12</sup> which would make the next part of our play, which portrays the interactions between George-a-Greene and Robin Hood, not infeasible.

The History informs us that Robin Hood was actually Earl of Huntington, but that he had been stripped of his title and possessions by his great enemy, the Bishop of Ely, who ran England as vice-regent while King Richard I was on Crusade; Marian was actually Matilda, daughter to one Lord Fitz-Walters, and that she had escaped into Sherwood Forest to be with her sweetheart Robin Hood after Prince John (Richard's brother) made unwelcome advances unto her.

1 Robin. Why is not lovely Marian blithe of cheer?
2 What ails my leman, that she gins to lour?

4 Say, good Marian, why art thou so sad?

6 Marian. Nothing, my Robin, grieves me to the heart
7 But, whensoever I do walk abroad,
8 I hear no songs but all of George-a-Greene;
9 Bettris, his fair leman, passeth me:
10 And this, my Robin, galls my very soul.

10 Robin. Content [thee]:

12 What recks it us, though George-a-Greene be stout,

14 So long as he doth proffer us no scath?
15 Envy doth seldom hurt but to itself;
16 And therefore, Marian, smile upon thy Robin.

16 Marian. Never will Marian smile upon her Robin,
17 Nor lie with him under the greenwood shade,
18 Till that thou go to Wakefield on a green,
19 And beat the Pinner for the love of me.

22 Robin. Content thee, Marian, I will ease thy grief,
23 My merry men and I will thither stray;
24 And here I vow that, for the love of thee,
25 I will beat George-a-Greene, or he shall beat me.

26 Scarlet. As I am Scarlet, next to Little John, 28 One of the boldest yeomen of the crew,

30 So will I wend with Robin all along,
31 And try this Pinner what he dares do.

32 Much. As I am Much, the miller's son,
33 That left my mill to go with thee,
34 And nill repent that I have done,
35 This pleasant life contenteth me;
36 In aught I may, to do thee good,
I'll live and die with Robin Hood.

= in a merry mood.

2: leman = sweetheart; leman is stressed on its first syllable.

lour = begins to frown or scowl.

1-3: the History makes Marian's depression a little more sinister-seeming, portraying Robin Hood as worried that Marian has fallen out of love with him, and "inclining to Prince John", who had never stopped pestering her with "letters" and "sundry gifts and presents."

= except. = about, around.

= except.

= beautiful. = surpasses me (in popularity).

= chafes, irritates.<sup>2</sup>

= the sense is, "take it easy".

12: "what does it matter to us, even if George-a-Greene is valiant or formidable (stout)".<sup>1</sup>

recks = concerns, troubles.<sup>1</sup>

= "does us no harm".

14: envy only harms the envier.

= have sexual relations with.<sup>1</sup> = shady forest.

= village green, ie. public place.

= ie. beat up.

= wander over there (to Wakefield).

27-28: Will Scarlet considers himself the bravest member, second only to Little John, of Robin Hood's crew. The ironically-named, oversized Little John was Robin Hood's second in command.

yeoman = foot-soldier.<sup>1</sup>

= go.

= try out, test.

Lines 32-37 (below): note the rhyme scheme of Much's brief speech: ababcc. Much's speech is also written in sing-songy iambic tetrameter, rather than in the more dignified pentameter.

= ie. join Robin Hood's band.

34: and will not (nill) regret his decision to do so.

36-37: Much would do anything for his leader.

38 Marian. And, Robin, Marian she will go with thee,
 40 To see fair Bettris how bright she is of blee.

42 Robin. Marian, thou shalt go with thy Robin. –
 44 Bend up your bows, and see your strings be tight,
 The arrows keen, and everything be ready,

And each of you a good bat on his neck,
 46 Able to lay a good man on the ground.

48 Scarl. I will have Friar Tuck's.

50 Much. I will have Little John's.

52 Robin. I will have one made of an ashen plank,
 Able to bear a bout or two. –

54 Then come on, Marian, let us go;
 For before the sun doth show the morning day,
 56 I will be at Wakefield to see this Pinner, George-a-Greene.

58 [Exeunt.]

ACT IV, SCENE III.

At Bradford.

*A Shoemaker discovered at work:
 enter Jenkin, carrying a staff.*

1 Jenkin. My masters, he that hath neither meat nor 2 money, and hath lost his credit with the alewife, for anything I know, may go supperless to bed. – But, 4 soft! who is here? here is a shoemaker; he knows where is the best ale. – Shoemaker, I pray thee tell me, 6 where is the best ale in the town?

8 Shoe. Afore, afore, follow thy nose; at the sign of the = hue or colour, especially of the face.<sup>1</sup>

43-46: Robin admonishes his men to make sure their weapons are in proper shape.

Bend up your bows = use string to bend their bows to an appropriate level of tension.<sup>1</sup>

keen = with sharp points.<sup>1</sup>

= the men should all carry a bat, or quarterstaff, across the backs of their necks; a quarterstaff was a long pole, normally possessing an iron tip, commonly used as a weapon in rural England.<sup>1,12</sup>

We may note that in the History, we are told that Robin Hood and his gang will leave their bows and arrows at home, carrying only their quarterstaves with them when they go to visit George.

= carry, borrow. = Friar Tuck, another famous companion of Robin Hood's, was both jolly and fond of food and drink, but a formidable fighter in his own right.

52: contemporary literature refers sometimes to staffs made of the wood of an ash tree.

53: suitable to be used for a fight or two: a brief bit of ironic understatement.

55: ie. "for before morning".

Entering Characters: the curtain is pulled back to reveal a Shoemaker at work. George-a-Greene's servant Jenkin enters the stage carrying a staff across the back of his neck.

1-5: My masters...best ale = Jenkin addresses the audience. meat = ie. food.

= cannot get a meal on credit anywhere; credit means both (1) good standing, and (2) services based on an expectation to be paid in the future.<sup>1</sup>

alewife = alehouse or tavern keeper.<sup>1,2</sup>

= wait!

8-9: the Shoemaker answers Jenkin without looking up at him.

Egg-shell. 10 12 14 16 18 20 22 24 26 28 30 32 34 36 38 40 42 44 46 48 50 52 54 56 58	Jenkin. Come, shoemaker, if thou wilt, and take thy part of a pot. Shoe. [Coming forward] Sirrah, down with your staff, down with your staff. Jenkin. Why, how now! is the fellow mad? I pray thee tell me, why should I hold down my staff? Shoe. You will down with him, will you not, sir? Jenkin. Why, tell me wherefore? Shoe. My friend, this is the town of merry Bradford, and here is a custom held, that none shall pass with his staff on his shoulders but he must have a bout with me; and so shall you, sir. Jenkin. And so will not I, sir. Shoe. That will I try. Barking dogs bite not the sorest. Jenkin. [Aside] I would to God I were once well rid of him. Shoe. Now, what, will you down with your staff? Jenkin. Why, you are not in earnest, are you? Shoe. If I am not, take that. [Strikes him.] Jenkin. You whoreson cowardly scab, it is but the part of a clapperdudgeon to strike a man in the street. But darest thou walk to the town's end with me? Shoe. Ay, that I dare do; but stay till I lay in my tools, and I will go with thee to the town's end presently. Jenkin. [Aside] I would I knew how to be rid of this fellow. Shoe. Come, sir, will you go to the town's end now, sir? Jenkin. Ay, sir, come. – [Scene changes to the town's end].	Afore = "right in front of you". 8-9: at the sign...Egg-shell = English taverns were identified by an image painted on the sign in front. 11-12: Jenkin invites the Shoemaker to join him for a drink. 14-15: the Shoemaker finally looks up, and notices that Jenkin is bearing his weapon across his neck. = take down, lower. = take it down. = why, for what reason. = the quarto prints Wakefield here, an obvious error. = round, fight. 29: Jenkin means he will not lower his staff.<sup>4</sup> 31: That will I try = the sense is, "we will see about that." Barking...sorest = he who is the most boastful will usually prove not to be the best fighter; a common proverbial conceit of the era. 33-34: Jenkin has no desire to fight the Shoemaker. would = wish. = villain. 45: part = ie. act. clapperdudgeon = slang name for a beggar born.<sup>1,3</sup> 46: Jenkin seemingly invites the Shoemaker to do battle – but not where they are presently standing. = wait. = ie. put away. = right away. 51-52: Jenkin did not expect his foe to leave his work just to fight with him. 59: we have seen before how the setting can change right in
---	--	--

60 Now we are at the town's end, what say you now?
 62 Shoe. Marry, come, let us even have a bout.
 64 Jenkin. Ha, stay a little; hold thy hands, I pray thee.
 66 Shoe. Why, what's the matter?
 68 Jenkin. Faith, I am Under-pinner of a town, and 70 there is an order, which if I do not keep, I shall be 72 turned out of mine office.
 74 Shoe. What is that, sir?
 76 Jenkin. Whensoever I go to fight with anybody, I
 78 use to flourish my staff thrice about my head before
 80 I strike, and then show no favour.
 82 Shoe. Well, sir, and till then I will not strike thee.
 84 Jenkin. Well, sir, here is once, twice: – here is my 86 hand, I will never do it the third time.
 88 Shoe. Why, then, I see we shall not fight.
 90 Jenkin. Faith, no: come, I will give thee two pots of 92 the best ale, and be friends.
 94 Shoe. [Aside] Faith, I see it is as hard to get water
 96 out of a flint as to get him to have a bout with me:
 98 therefore I will enter into him for some good cheer. –
 My friend, I see thou art a faint-hearted fellow, thou hast no stomach to fight, therefore let us go to the ale-house and drink.
Jenkin. Well, content: go thy ways, and say thy prayers, thou 'scap'st my hands to-day.
 [Exeunt.]

ACT IV, SCENE IV.

At Wakefield.

Enter George-a-Greene and Bettris.

1 George. Tell me, sweet love, how is thy mind content?
 2 What, canst thou brook to live with George-a-Greene?
 4 Bettris. O, George, how little pleasing are these words!
 Came I from Bradford for the love of thee,
 6 And left my father for so sweet a friend?

the middle of a scene without warning.

63: the Shoemaker raises his staff in anticipation.

= truly. = Jenkin serves under George. = ie. Wakefield.
 = rule. = follow.
 = fired from.

= ie. must. = wave.
 = ie. "I may fight as hard as I can."

79: the Shoemaker unwisely agrees to allow Jenkin to perform his customary routine before he will strike him.

81-82: here is my hand = Jenkin offers to shake the Shoemaker's hand.

= ie. take up Jenkin's offer to drink together.

96-97: Jenkin, with a bit of a wisecrack, suggests the Shoemaker should thank God that he avoided getting a good thrashing at Jenkin's hands.

= endure, bear.

4-7: Bettris is unhappy that, after all she went through to escape the clutches of her father just to reach George, he would still question her attraction and loyalty to him – even

Here will I live until my life do end. 8 George. Happy am I to have so sweet a love. – 10 But what are these come tracing here along? 12 Bettris. Three men come striking through the corn, my love. 14 Enter Robin Hood, Maid Marian, Scarlet and Much. 16 George. Back again, you foolish travellers, For you are wrong, and may not wend this way. 18 Robin. That were great shame. Now, by my soul, proud sir, 20 We be three tall yeomen, and thou art but one. – Come, we will forward in despite of him. 22 George. Leap the ditch, or I will make you skip. 24 What, cannot the highway serve your turn, But you must make a path over the corn? 26 Robin. Why, art thou mad? dar'st thou encounter three? 28 We are no babes, man, look upon our limbs. 30 George. Sirrah, The biggest limbs have not the stoutest hearts. 32 Were ye as good as Robin Hood and his three merry men, I'll drive you back the same way that ye came. 34 Be ye men, ye scorn to encounter me all at once; But be ye cowards, set upon me all three, 36 And try the Pinner what he dares perform. 38 Scarl. Were thou as high in deeds As thou art haughty in words, 40 Thou well mightest be a champion for the king:	if, as we understand, he spoke with humorous and ironic understatement. = who. = heading, passing. = making their way.<sup>1</sup> Entering Characters: though Bettris only mentions that three men are approaching, George does address Marion later in the scene (line 82), so she is included in the party of trespassers. 16-17: despite all that has transpired, George still has a job to do, and he warns the approaching party not to trespass on the fields of the town. wend = go. = valiant, strong in combat. = proceed. = spite. 23: Leap the ditch = George employs a common expression of no particular metaphoric meaning in advising the intruders to follow his instructions. skip = leap, jump.<sup>1</sup> = purpose. = face in battle.<sup>1</sup> = form of address used to signal a reprimand and assumption of authority over another.<sup>1</sup> 31: a bigger or physically stronger man is not necessarily the bravest (stoutest).<sup>1</sup> = "even if you were as fine fighters". ye = plural form of you. = ie. "I would". 34: ie. if his opponents were real men, they would fight him one at a time, and not all at once. = "but if you are cowards"; in the History, George actually calls his opponents "base and effeminate cowards" for thinking to attack him all three at once. = test. 38-39: "if your actions prove to be as impressive as your words are arrogant". 40: Robin Hood alludes to the traditional nobleman, known as Champion of the King, who plays a formal role in an English monarch's coronation ceremony: at the post-ceremony banquet, the Champion rides into Westminster Hall, throws down his gauntlet, and challenges anyone who
---	--

42 But empty vessels have the loudest sounds,
And cowards prattle more than men of worth.

44 George. Sirrah, darest thou try me?

46 Scarl. Ay, sirrah, that I dare.

48 [They fight, and George-a-Greene beats him.]

50 Much. How now! what, art thou down? –
Come, sir, I am next.

52 [They fight, and George-a-Greene beats him.]

54 Robin. Come, sirrah, now to me: spare me not,
For I'll not spare thee.

58 George. Make no doubt I will be as liberal to thee.

60 [They fight; Robin Hood stays.]

62 Robin. Stay, George, for here I do protest,
Thou art the stoutest champion
64 that ever I laid hands upon.

66 George. Soft, you sir! by your leave, you lie;
You never yet laid hands on me.

68 Robin. George, wilt thou forsake Wakefield,
70 And go with me?
Two liveries will I give thee every year,
72 And forty crowns shall be thy fee.

74 George. Why, who art thou?

76 Robin. Why, Robin Hood:
I am come hither with my Marian
78 And these my yeomen for to visit thee.

80 George. Robin Hood!
Next to King Edward art thou lief to me.
82 Welcome, sweet Robin; welcome, Maid Marian;
And welcome, you my friends. Will you to my poor house?

84 You shall have wafer-cakes your fill,
A piece of beef hung up since Martlemas, disputes the king's right to the crown to single-combat. The king salutes the champion by drinking to him, and sends him a gilt cup filled with wine; the champion drinks the wine and keeps the cup.<sup>13</sup> The Dymoke family has held this office since at least the 14th century, though the formal ceremony as described above was last employed at the coronation of George IV.<sup>14</sup> = talk, chatter.

55-56: Robin Hood suggests that neither one of them should hold back.

= generous.

= pauses.

= avow, profess.

= fiercest or most valiant warrior or combatant.<sup>1</sup>

= "hold on there". = "with your permission".

= leave.

= (new) suits of clothes; in the short ballad, The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield, with Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John, Robin Hood promised to give George "livery twice in the year, The one green, the other brown," if George would join his merry band. Our dramatist clearly borrowed some language from this ballad for our play.

= in order.

= (only) after. = dearest.

= ie. "will you come to".

84-85: George's repeats his offer of fare with the exact words he used to address the noble rebels at Act II.iii. 321-2.

86 Mutton and veal: if this like you not,
Take that you find, or that you bring, for me.

88 Robin. Godamercies, good George,
90 I'll be thy guest to-day.

92 George. Robin, therein thou honourest me.
94 I'll lead the way.

[Exeunt.]

END OF ACT IV.

86-87: if this...for me = ie. "if what I have to offer is not satisfactory, then take whatever else you can find in my kitchen, or bring your own food." George expands the formulaic conclusion to his offer that he used at Act II.iii.323.

like = pleases.

= thank you.

ACT V.

SCENE I.

At Bradford.

*Several Shoemakers discovered at work.
Enter King Edward and James (King of Scots) disguised, each carrying a staff.*

1 K. Edw. Come on, King James; now we are thus disguised,
2 There's none, I know, will take us to be kings:
I think we are now in Bradford,
4 Where all the merry shoemakers dwell.

6 Ist Shoe. Down with your staves, my friends,
Down with them.

8 K. Edw. Down with our staves! I pray thee, why so?

10 Ist Shoe. My friend, I see thou art a stranger here,
12 Else wouldst thou not have questioned of the thing.
This is the town of merry Bradford,
14 And here hath been a custom kept of old,
That none may bear his staff upon his neck,
16 But trail it all along throughout the town,
Unless they mean to have a bout with me.

18 K. Edw. But hear you, sir, hath the king granted you
20 This custom?

22 Ist Shoe. King or kaiser, none shall pass this way,
Except King Edward;
24 No, not the stoutest groom that haunts his court;
Therefore down with your staves.

26 K. Edw. [To James] What were we best to do?

28 K. James. Faith, my lord, they are stout fellows;

30 And, because we will see some sport,
We will trail our staves.

32 K. Edw. Hear'st thou, my friend?
34 Because we are men of peace and travellers,
We are content to trail our staves.

36 Ist Shoe. The way lies before you, go along.
38

Entering Characters: we will see here a scene parallel to that which began Act IV.iii, but in this case it is the disguised kings of England and Scotland who will encounter the defenders of the strange custom portrayed in that earlier scene; the kings are carrying their weapons across the backs of their necks.

= recognize.

= plural for staff.

= ie. (must) drag his staff on the ground behind him.
= intend. = fight, match.

19-20: a logical question: such a tradition, which allows a town's citizens to threaten violence on otherwise peaceable visitors, should not be permitted to exist without the sanction of the king! In the History, the shoemakers tell the king that the tradition was one which "they have observed time out of mind."

= a common expression; kaiser = emperor.

= ie. not even. = bravest servant.

29-31: James suggests they accede to the Shoemaker's demand.

= ie. "we would experience some diversion or entertainment", a euphemism for, "we would be on the receiving end of a thrashing".

40 Enter Robin Hood and George-a-Greene, disguised. 42 Robin. See, George, two men are passing through the town, 44 Two lusty men, and yet they trail their staves. 46 George. Robin, They are some peasants tricked in yeoman's weeds. – Hollo, you two travellers! 48 K. Edw. Call you us, sir? 50 George. Ay, you. Are ye not big enough to bear Your bats upon your necks, but you must trail them Along the streets? 54 K. Edw. Yes, sir, we are big enough; But here is a custom kept, That none may pass, his staff upon his neck, Unless he trail it at the weapon's point. 56 Sir, we are men of peace, and love to sleep In our whole skins, and therefore quietness is best. 60 George. Base-minded peasants, worthless to be men! What, have you bones and limbs to strike a blow, And be your hearts so faint you cannot fight? 62 Were't not for shame, I would shrub your shoulders well, And teach you manhood against another time. 64 66 1st Shoe. [To George] Well preached, Sir Jack! down with your staff! 68 70 K. Edw. Do you hear, my friends? an you be wise, Keep down your staves, for all the town will rise upon you. 72 George. [To Edward] Thou speakest like an honest, quiet fellow: But hear you me; in spite of all the swains 74 Of Bradford town, bear me your staves upon your necks, Or, to begin withal, I'll baste you both so well, You were never better basted in your lives. 76 78 K. Edw. We will hold up our staves. 80 82 [George-a-Greene fights with the Shoemakers, and beats them all down.] 84 George. What, have you any more?	41ff: both Robin Hood and George sneeringly consider the disguised kings, who are obviously healthy-enough-looking to do battle with the Shoemakers, as cowards. = hardy, vigorous.<sup>1</sup> 45: they are mere peasants dressed up (tricked) in the clothes of men who are of a higher rank than they occupy. = ie. strong. = staves. 58-59: love to sleep...skins = euphemism for, "we prefer not to be beaten up," = cowardly.<sup>1</sup> 64-65: it would be beneath George to thrash (shrub)<sup>1</sup> such obvious low-lives. shrub = Dyce emends shrub to drub. Line 65: and teach them how to act like real men in the future; against = in anticipation of. 67: Sir = Sir was commonly used (before a person's given name, as here) as a courteous form of address for a priest or simple cleric, hence its use here with preached.<sup>1</sup> Jack = a commonly employed generic name for a male. = "if you are smart". = set upon, assail. = ie. "even in the face of being attacked by every peasant (swain)". = ie. "bear": another example of the ethical dative. = with. = ie. beat.
---	---

86 Call all your town forth, cut and longtail. 88 [The Shoemakers spy George-a-Greene.]	86: George is prepared to face off against the entire town.  cut and longtail = a common expression which divides all dogs into two classes, those with their tails cut short, and those not; hence, used metaphorically here to mean "everyone".<sup>9</sup>  In the History, the entire town enters the fray!
90 Ist Shoe. What, George a-Greene, is it you? A plague found you!  I think you longed to swinge me well.  92 Come, George, we will crush a pot before we part.	88: the History tells us that George's disguise fell off during the battle, at which point the Shoemakers recognized him.  spy = see, ie. recognize. 90-92: the Shoemakers are actually delighted to see George.  found = ie. confound.<sup>1</sup>  = beat.  = ie. drink liberally.
94 George. A pot, you slave! we will have an hundred. –  Here, Will Perkins, take my purse; fetch me  96 A stand of ale, and set [it] in the market-place,  That all may drink that are athirst this day;  98 For this is for a fee to welcome Robin Hood  To Bradford town. 100 [The stand of ale is brought out,  102 and they fall a-drinking.]	= perhaps one of the Shoemakers.  = an open barrel of ale.<sup>1</sup>  = thirsty.  = ie. a gift for services with which.<sup>1</sup>
104 Here, Robin, sit thou here;  For thou art the best man at the board this day.  106 You that are strangers, place yourselves where you will.  Robin,  108 Here's a carouse to good King Edward's self;  And they that love him not, I would we had  110 The basting of them a little.	= table. = toast, large quaff.<sup>1</sup>  109-110: I would...little = "I hope we get an opportunity to beat them up."
112 [Enter the Earl of Warwick with other Noblemen,  bringing out the King's garments;  114 then George-a-Greene and the rest  kneel down to the King.	Entering Characters: in this dumb show (action without speech), King Edward's identity is silently revealed; George and the other characters respond appropriately to this surprising development, humbling themselves before their sovereign.
116 K. Edw. Come, masters, all fellows. – Nay, Robin,  118 You are the best man at the board to-day. –  Rise up, George.  120	117-9: Edwards asks his subjects to stand up.  all fellows = ie. "we are all equal this day."
122 George. Nay, good my liege, ill-nurtured we were, then:  Though we Yorkshire men be blunt of speech,  And little skilled in court or such quaint fashions,  124 Yet nature teacheth us duty to our king;  Therefore I	Lines 121-6 (below): a conventional moment: George acknowledges that he and the others have treated their king disrespectfully, and humbly apologizes for doing so; thus, even though (1) they had no idea who they were speaking to, and (2) Edward clearly does not hold their actions against them, George still formally asks for his sovereign's forgiveness.
122 Though we Yorkshire men be blunt of speech,  And little skilled in court or such quaint fashions,  124 Yet nature teacheth us duty to our king;  Therefore I	123: and have no training in courtly manners.  quaint = gracious, refined.<sup>1</sup>  124: "yet we instinctively know how to address and behave towards our king."

126	Humbly beseech you pardon George-a-Greene.
128	Robin. And, good my lord, a pardon for poor Robin; And for us all a pardon, good King Edward.
130	Ist Shoe. I pray you, a pardon for the shoemakers.
132
134	K. Edw. I frankly grant a pardon to you all:	= without reservation, freely. The History informs us that the English king (Richard) restored to Robin his title and possessions, and further granted him permission to marry Marian. In the History , we are further told that the king was actually " incensed " at the Shoemakers, and was appeased and pardoned them only after they performed a " country morris dance " for him.
		[ They rise. ]
136	And, George-a-Greene, give me thy hand;
138	There's none in England that shall do thee wrong. Even from my court I came to see thyself;
140	And now I see that fame speaks naught but truth.	= ie. George's reputation is not exaggerated.
142	George. I humbly thank your royal majesty. That which I did against the Earl of Kendal,	142-5: George is attractively modest.
144	It was but a subject's duty to his sovereign, And therefore little merit[s] such good words.	= kind, complimentary.
146
	K. Edw. But ere I go, I'll grace thee with good deeds.	147: Edward still plans to reward George before ( ere ) they all part.
148	Say what King Edward may perform, And thou shalt have it, being in England's bounds.	148: Edward asks George to name his own reward. = ie. within reason.
150
	George. I have a lovely leman ,	= sweetheart.
152	As bright of blee as is the silver moon, And old Grime her father will not let her match	= hue.
154	With me, because I am a Pinner, Although I love her, and she me, dearly.	= marry.
156
	K. Edw. Where is she?
158
	George. At home at my poor house, And vows never to marry unless her father Give consent; which is my great grief, my lord.
160
162
	K. Edw. If this be all, I will dispatch it straight ; I'll send for Grime and force him give his grant: He will not deny King Edward such a suit .	= dispense with this matter immediately.  = request.
164
166
		Enter Jenkin.
168
	Jenkin. Ho, who saw a master of mine? – Oh, he is gotten into company, and a body should rake hell for company.	170-1: and a body...company = ie. it appears to Jenkin that George has had to search hell itself to find company; a humorous implication that George's companions are villains. and = if.
170
172	George. Peace , ye slave! see where King Edward is.	= shut up.

174	K. Edw. George, what is he?	= who.
176	George. I beseech your grace pardon him; he is my
178	man .	= servant.
180	1st Shoe. Sirrah , the king hath been drinking with us,	= appropriate form of address for a servant.
182	and did pledge us too.
184	Jenkin. Hath he so? kneel; I dub you gentlemen.
186	1st Shoe. Beg it of the king, Jenkin.	185: ie. "Jenkin, ask the king for permission to do so."
188	Jenkin. I will. – I beseech your worship grant me	187-8: Jenkin is a little presumptuous: luckily for him, Ed-
190	one thing.	ward is in a generous mood.
192	K. Edw. What is that?
194	Jenkin. Hark in your ear.	= listen.
196	[Whispers King Edward in the ear.]
198	K. Edw. Go your ways, and do it.
200	Jenkin. [To Shoemakers] Come, down on your knees,
202	I have got it.
204	1st Shoe. Let us hear what it is first.
206	Jenkin. Marry, because you have drunk with the king,	203-7: in the 1590's, shoemaking began to be referred to as
208	and the king hath so graciously pledged you, you shall	the gentle craft , or less frequently, the gentle trade , the
210	be no more called Shoemakers; but you and yours, to	suggestion being that shoemaking was an art appropriate for
212	the world's end, shall be called the trade of the Gentle	gentlemen. The term became famous for its repeated use in
214	Craft.	Thomas Dekker's popular 1600 play, The Shoemaker's
216	1st Shoe. I beseech your majesty reform this which	Holiday .
218	he hath spoken.	= see the next note at line 212.
220	Jenkin. I beseech your worship consume this which	Lines 209 and 212: with consume , and possibly also
222	he hath spoken.	reform (line 209), Jenkin and the 1st Shoemaker have
224	K. Edw. "Confirm" it, you would say. –	respectively misspoken, as recognized by Edward.
226	Well, he hath done it for you, it is sufficient. –
228	Come, George, we will go to Grime, and have thy love.
230	Jenkin. I am sure your worship will abide ; for yonder	= pause, wait a moment. <sup>1</sup>
232	is coming old Musgrove and mad Cuddy his son. –
234	Master, my fellow Wily comes dressed like a woman,
236	and Master Grime will marry Wily. Here they come.
238	Enter Musgrove and Cuddy;
240	Grime, Wily disguised as a woman,

226	Maid Marian, and Bettris.
228	K. Edw. Which is thy old father, Cuddy?
230	Cuddy. This, if it please your majesty.
232	[ Musgrove kneels. ]
234	K. Edw. Ah, old Musgrove, kneel up ; It fits not such grey hairs to kneel.	= arise; the OED defines to kneel up to mean "to rise on the knees;" some editors unnecessarily emend this to stand up .
236	Musgr. [ Rising ] Long live my sovereign!
238	Long and happy be his days!
240	Vouchsafe , my gracious lord, a simple gift At Billy Musgrove's hand.	= deign (to receive). = from his own hands.
242	King James at Middleham Castle gave me this; This won the honour, and this give I thee.	= it appears from Musgrove's comment that the Barley's castle, by which the battle with the Scottish took place, was in fact Middleham Castle; but see line 252 below. The castle of Middleham is found in north Yorkshire, about ten miles south of Richmond; now a spectacular ruin, it was the childhood home of the future Richard III. <sup>6</sup>
244	[ Gives sword to King Edward. ]
246	K. Edw. Godamercy , Musgrove, for this friendly gift; And, for thou felledst a king with this same weapon,	= thank you. = because. = defeated. <sup>1</sup>
248	This blade shall here dub valiant Musgrove knight.
250	Musgr. Alas, what hath your highness done? I am poor.	250: ironically, Musgrove does not want to be a knight, because he is not wealthy enough to pay for the accoutrements a knight was expected to possess.
252	K. Edw. To mend thy living take thou Middleham Castle ,  The hold of both , and if thou want living , complain ;	252: "to augment your income, take possession of Middleham Castle". But of course, the Barley's presumably still in this stronghold. See lines 337-8 below for the final piece of this muddle.  253: The hold of both = possession of both properties; clearly some language has been lost here. <sup>4</sup> Dickinson prefers And hold of me , meaning that Musgrove will take ownership of the castle directly from the king. want living = ie. (still) lack sufficient funds or income. complain = technically, make a formal statement of a grievance. <sup>1</sup>
254	Thou shalt have more to maintain thine estate . – George, which is thy love?	= "support your rank or financial condition."
256	George. This, if please your majesty.
258	K. Edw. Art thou her aged father?
260	Grime. I am, and it like your majesty.	= ie. "if it please".
262	K. Edw. And wilt not give thy daughter unto George?
264	Grime. Yes, my lord, if he will let me marry With this lovely lass.
266

268	K. Edw. What say'st thou, George?
270	George. With all my heart, my lord, I give consent.
272	Grime. Then do I give my daughter unto George.
274	Wily. Then shall the marriage soon be at an end. Witness, my lord, if that I be a woman;
276
	[Wily throws off his disguise.]
278	For I am Wily, boy to George-a-Greene, 280 Who for my master wrought this subtle shift .	= arranged, worked out. = cunning subterfuge. <sup>2</sup>
282	K. Edw. What, is it a boy? – what say'st thou to this, Grime?
284	Grime. Marry, my lord, I think this boy hath More knavery than all the world besides. 286 Yet am I content that George shall both have My daughter and my lands .	= villainy. = as a dowry or ultimate inheritance.
288	K. Edw. Now, George, it rests I gratify thy worth :	= it only remains for the king to reward George as he deserves.
290	And therefore here I do bequeath to thee, In full possession, half that Kendal hath ;	= ie. half of all Kendal's wealth and possessions.
292	And what as Bradford holds of me in chief, I give it frankly unto thee for ever. 294 Kneel down, George.	292-3: Edward further grants any and all of the monarchy's property in Bradford to George. frankly = completely, without restriction.
296	George. What will your majesty do?
298	K. Edw. Dub thee a knight, George.
300	George. I beseech your grace, grant me one thing.
302	K. Edw. What is that?
304	George. Then let me live and die a yeoman still:	304: like Musgrove before him, George too prefers not to be made a knight, though it is not for pecuniary reasons that he declines the honour. yeoman = a small-holder, the rank just below that of gentleman.
	So was my father, so must live his son. 306 For 'tis more credit to men of base degree, To do great deeds, than men of dignity. 308	306-7: George claims there is greater honour to be won by a man of lesser rank performing heroic deeds than could be gained by those of higher status, perhaps because it is more surprising when a lower-ranked man accomplishes something so impressive.
310	K. Edw. Well, be it so, George.
	K. James. I beseech your grace dispatch with me ,	= "settle my situation".
312	And set down my ransom.	312: it was traditional for men of high rank to be able to buy their freedom – usually for quite a bit of money – when they have been captured in battle.
314	K. Edw. George-a-Greene, Set down the King of Scots his ransom.

316 318	George. I beseech your grace pardon me; It passeth my skill.	318: George modestly claims that this responsibility is beyond his abilities. passeth = surpasses.
320	K. Edw. Do it, the honour's thine.
322 324 326 328	George. Then let King James make good Those towns which he hath burnt upon the borders; Give a small pension to the fatherless, Whose fathers he caused murdered in those wars;— [ To James ] Put in pledge for these things to your grace, And so return.	= ie. make reparations for.  = ie. those whose fathers were recently slain by the Scottish.  327: "swear that you will do these things".
330	K. Edw. King James, are you content?
332 334	K. James. I am content, and like your majesty, And will leave good castles in security.	= if it pleases.
336 338	K. Edw. I crave no more. — Now, George-a-Greene, I'll to thy house; and when I have supped, I'll go to Ask , And see if Jane-a-Barley be so fair	= ask. = ie. go to. = village abutting the north side of Richmond. 338: so the Barleys, perhaps, do not live at Middleham after all!
340	As good King James reports her for to be. And for the ancient custom of Vail staff , Keep it still, claim privilege from me:	338: fair = beautiful.  340-1: Edward formally sanctions the practice of the Shoemakers to challenge all newcomers who carry their staves across the back of their necks.
342 344	If any ask a reason why, or how, Say, English Edward vailed his staff to you.	Vail staff = "lower staff".
	[ Exeunt. ]
	FINIS

FOOTNOTES

Footnotes in the text correspond as follows:

1. Oxford English Dictionary (OED) online.
2. Crystal, David and Ben. Shakespeare's Words. London; New York: Penguin, 2002.
3. Collins, J. Churton. The Plays and Poems of Robert Greene. Oxford: The Clarendon Press, 1905.
4. Dyce, Rev. Alexander. The Dramatic and Poetical Works of Robert Greene and George Peele. London: George Routledge and Sons, 1876.
5. Sugden, Edward. A Topographical Dictionary to the Works of Shakespeare and His Fellow Dramatists. Manchester: The University Press, 1925.
6. English Heritage website. Middleham Castle. Retrieved 6/20/2021: www.english-heritage.org.uk/visit/places/middleham-castle/.
7. Skeat, Walter W. A Glossary of Tudor and Stuart Words. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1914.
8. Nares, Robert et al. A Glossary, etc. London: Reeves and Turner, 1888.
9. Dyce, Alexander. The Works of William Shakespeare, Vol. ix. London: Chapman and Hall, 1876.
10. Encyclopaedia Britannica website. Fealty and Homage. Retrieved 1/03/2021: www.britannica.com/topic/homage.
11. Scotsman website. The Seven Bloodiest Battles in Scottish history. Retrieved 6/17/2021: www.scotsman.com/arts-and-culture/seven-bloodiest-battles-scottish-history-1435345.
12. Historic UK website. Robin Hood. Retrieved 6/18/2021: www.historic-uk.com/HistoryUK/HistoryofEngland/Robin-Hood/.
13. Bailey, N. et al. Dictionarium Britannicum. London: the Lamb, 1730.
14. Family History website. Dymoke – The name of Champions. Retrieved 6/19/2021: <https://familyhistory.wordpress.com/2010/12/14/dymoke/>.
15. Dickinson, Thomas H., ed. Robert Greene. London: T. Fisher Unwin, 1909?